City launches a series of salutes to officer slain in October ambush

The family of a slain police officer who lived in Darlington got a key to the city Nov. 13, and that's not all the honors City Council plans for Sgt. Terrence Carraway.

Council also hopes to rename a street and plans to name a playground after Carraway, a veteran Florence Police Department officer who was killed Oct. 3 when a Florence County gunman opened fire on several law-enforcement officers, wounding five and killing two.

"That's a hero," Darlington Mayor Gloria Hines said of Carraway, who she had known since he was a child.

The mayor presented Carraway's family with a golden key to the city, and council voted to endorse renaming Southern Pine Street after Carraway and naming a playground (a former Little League field) after him. Changing a street name will require an OK from the city planning commission and a public hearing. Residents on the street will be contacted and asked for their reaction. Names that council members discussed included "Sgt. Carraway Street," "Carraway Street" and "Sgt. T. Carraway Street."

"I'm just humbled," said the officer's widow, Allison. She said her husband's death was "a needless sacrifice," but added: "The legacy of Terrence Carraway will live on." She and her family members got a standing ovation from the audience at the council meeting at City Hall.

Other business before council was more contentious. Residents rose to talk to council about two recent political incidents causing ripples in the community – an advertisement in the News & Press in which a Lowcountry political consultant blasted City Councilwoman Carolyn Bruce and a later conflict between another councilwoman, Sheila Baccus, and a woman Baccus barred from a Ward 1 constituents' meeting.

One resident, photographer Andrea Knapp, blasted the advertisement that consultant Donald Gilliard purchased in the Oct. 31 News & Press. The ad accused Bruce of "selling out" black voters on an issue involving the city's hiring of an engineering firm. Knapp found the advertisement racist, defended Bruce and ripped City Council for not publicly standing up for her.

"How do you, fellow council members, allow such derogatory, inflammatory and untrue statements (to) be said against one of your fellow council members?" Knapp asked. "How do you not publicly stand up for each other?"

"For every positive thing that happens in Darlington – the Sweet Potato Festival, the Christmas Lights, A Taste of Christmas, everything the Greater Darlington Chamber (of Commerce) does – all of this gets (lost) when horrendous behavior we have seen is accepted," Knapp told council. "All you've done is promote racial disharmony in the community."

$245,000 playground expected by spring

By Bobby Bryant

editor@newsandpress.net

By spring, officials hope to unveil what will be the biggest playground in Darlington.

Darlington City Council on Nov. 13 voted to accept a $245,000 bid to construct a large playground at Siskron and Hampton streets. The funds are coming from hospitality-tax money, said Darlington County Recreation Director Lee Andrews.

The project, being handled by Georgia-based Bliss Products – "Bliss gave us more for the money," Andrews said – is expected to be completed sometime in the spring. No date is set, Andrews said.

City Councilman Bryant Gardner, a longtime supporter of the project, said this is the result of years of effort on the part of many people, and he thanked council for moving forward. "This gives everyone in our community the ability to enjoy a nice playground. This is one of our biggest investments in the quality of life in Darlington in a number of decades."

The playground will include a dog park, a zip line, musical play equipment and two "play structures" – one for toddlers, one for everyone. These include slides and a climbing area. A trail system may eventually be part of the playground.

'Another option': Charter school coming to Hartsville

by Samantha Lyles

slyles@newsandpress.net

At their Nov. 13 regular meeting, Hartsville City Council learned more about a planned charter school that could open in time for the 2020 fall semester.

The proposed Butler Academy would initially serve students in kindergarten through 6th grade then expand all the way to 12th grade, said Jerome Reyes, coordinator of the PULSE (Partners for Unparalleled Local Scholastic Excellence) program at the South Carolina Governor's School for Science and Mathematics (GSSM).

Reyes discussed how programs like the Hartsville High School International Baccalaureate (IB) and PULSE offer top students unique learning opportunities in fields ranging from molecular biology to aviation. But, he said, such educational resources could be more equitably distributed.

"Our academic success stories do not reflect the demographics of our town," said Reyes. "Your track and your trajectory is very much a product of where you're zoned at the elementary school level... then once you get to high school or middle school, it's a product of what track you're in. We see a lot of imbalance there."

Those underrepresented students are not just marginalized on the basis of race, said Reyes. He noted that delayed readers, rural or poverty-stricken students, and non-native English speakers can also get shortchanged. Reyes said these gaps only grow when school programs are high prestige. He cited the HHS IB program, which only has two black males enrolled out of 191 students.

Reyes said that Hartsville families currently have only one public school choice: the Darlington County School District, which he likened to a giant cruise ship designed to meet the needs of the many. Butler Charter School would be a more maneuverable vessel, able to navigate individual student needs.

"If you feel like this is not working for you, whatever category you fall in of being marginalized, underrepresented or underserved, you deserve another option," said Reyes.

At Fort Jackson, the red-cockaded woodpecker is not so endangered

Story courtesy of Fort Jackson

COLUMBIA – The red-cockaded woodpecker is an endangered species, but its population growth on Fort Jackson set records in 2018.

Post officials are optimistic the increased numbers of birds may lessen or eliminate training restrictions in RCW habitat in the future.

"We've increased the population significantly," said Doug Morrow, chief of the Directorate of Public Works' Wildlife Branch.

The RCW population has shrunken by about 99 percent since Europeans settled in America.

Roughly 5,600 family groups remain today, compared to the original 1-1.6 million. The population was officially considered "endangered" in 1970 and won the protection of the 1973 Endangered Species Act.

Fort Jackson has since made conservation efforts. The Wildlife Branch of the Directorate of Public Works has built up the RCW's ecosystem.

This woodpecker's primary habitat is the longleaf pine ecosystem. Roughly 97 percent of it has been destroyed in the U.S. by advancements such as settlement, timber harvesting, urbanization and agriculture. Also, 6,801 acres of longleaf pine have been restored at Fort Jackson since 1994.

Installation biologists are using herbicides to convert some slash pine forests to longleaf pine forests and keeping underbrush low to improve the bird's habitats.

On average, over the past five years, 11,819 acres have been burned on post annually, along with 2,388 thinned.

"It creates a habitat (RCWs) prefer," said Nicole Hawkins, a wildlife biologist at Fort Jackson. It allows for open park lighting.

One side effect is increased vegetation that RCWs thrive under, she added.

Artificial cavities -- RCW homes -- have also driven up the population count. Left to their own devices, RCWs can spend as many as 10 years making a single cavity. Humans can craft one in 45 minutes.

The Habitat Management Unit at Fort Jackson makes up 26,645 of the installation's total 51,316 acres, excluding 8,787 for mission requirements.

Of them, only 391 total acres, distributed throughout the installation, carry training restrictions related to the species.

The acreage is broken down into small sections. Trees with cavities have a 200-foot buffer zone around them where limitations apply.

"That's very minimal," Hawkins said.

Some training can still take place, provided it doesn't last more than two hours.

Some installations have been able to entirely remove training restrictions because of population stabilization. Within the next year or two, a review of post policies could potentially allow for change here, too, Hawkins said.

That would benefit the training mission, Morrow said. With restrictions lifted, "the bird will be invisible to the soldier, essentially," Morrow said.

The Army would have more flexibility.

For instance, a new range could potentially be built in RCW territory, if necessary.

The 2018 nesting season was the best on the books, according to many measures.

There was a 7 percent uptick in active clusters, groups of trees with inhabited cavities, in the past year -- from 41 to 44. An increase of just 5 percent was the goal.

There were 41 potential breeding groups, RCW gatherings with at least one fertile male and female -- an 8 percent rise -- among them.

Thirty-seven reportedly attempted nesting, 150 eggs were laid -- 125 was the former record -- and more than 80 hatched.

Seventy-two were banded for tracking purposes. At 7-10 days old, some baby birds have uniquely-colored bands placed on their legs. It allows them to be seen with spotting scopes and be individually identified.

Be thankful at Thanksgiving

By Bill Shepard

If you have eyes to see the beauty about you, be thankful.

If you have ears to hear the sounds around you, be thankful.

If you have legs strong enough to take you where you want to go, be thankful.

If you have enough food on your table to kill hunger, be thankful.

If you have a place to lie down and sleep, sheltered from the heat and cold, be thankful.

Everyone does not have these things.

The following poem has been in my possession at least 50 years. It was given to me by a Bible teacher in a public school where I was teaching. This teacher's salary was paid for by the several churches in that community. That says something about how long ago it was.

The author of this poem is unknown, but I have read it and quoted it in many places, and on various occasions. Recently I was invited back to that same school to speak at an annual meeting of former students and faculty members. I shared the poem and the story behind it, and now I share it with you. Here it is as it was given to me.

THE WORLD IS MINE

Today, upon a bus, I saw a lovely girl with golden hair
I envied her, she seemed so gay, and I wished I was as fair.
When suddenly she arose to leave, I watched her hobble down the aisle.
Under one arm she carried a crutch. But as she passed, she smiled.
Then I said, "Oh God, forgive me when I whine,
"I have two good legs and the world is mine."

Later, walking down the street, I saw a child with eyes of blue.
He stood and watched the others play; it seemed he knew not what to do.
Then I said, "Why don't you join the others, dear?"
He looked ahead without a word, and then I knew he could not hear.
And I said, "Oh, God, forgive me when I whine,
"I have two ears that hear and the world is mine."

Then I stopped to buy some sweets.
The lad that sold them had much charm.
I stayed and talked with him a while; if I were late, it would do no harm.
When I arose to leave, he said, "Thank you, you've been so kind.
"It's nice to talk with folk like you, you see," he said, "I am blind."
Then I said, "Oh, God forgive me when I whine,
"I have good eyes and the world is mine."

With feet to take me where I go,
And eyes to see the sunset's glow,
And ears to hear what I would know,
"Oh, God, forgive me when I whine,
"I'm blessed indeed, the world is mine."
--Author unknown

Have a thankful Thanksgiving.

My boyhood blacksmith

By Tom Poland

Here's a tale of a horseshoe that cracked yours truly in the head, a tale that began near a handsome old shack. Cap Dunn, a blacksmith, lived there. Cap's blacksmith shop stood near a big oak that looked like it could be 300 years old. Inside it was dark and the coals glowed red-yellow. Cap hammered molten metal into shape in that small shop, long gone now.

I'd hear Cap's anvil ringing in my boyhood days, and I'd venture across the Augusta Highway to watch him hammer iron.

The sparks would fly and the metal would ring. He'd plunge red-hot iron into a bucket of water and steam would rise with a mighty hiss. You could hear him hammering clear across the highway through the pines at a place I still call home. His hammering had rhythm ... he was striking blows with precision and purpose. It was just a hop, skip and a jump to Cap's place. Often I went up there and one day I asked him a favor. "Would you make me a set of horseshoes?"

He did. It was my first set and I loved those flat, lightweight shoes. They were nothing like the thick, heavy professional sets. No, Cap fashioned me a set of shoes from scrap metal. Didn't charge me a cent. Old Cap didn't know it at the time, but he was saving me a lot of grief when he hammered out that thin set of shoes.

Dad gave me two iron stakes from his shop and I was in business. I made a horseshoe pit out in what we call the football field, an expanse of grass with two pines at one end that made a makeshift field goal when we hung a pole across them.

Whenever I could, I'd get some fellows together to play football there back when those pines were skinny, nothing like the big pines they are today. Outside of some roll the bat and football, we mostly played horseshoes there.

Many a day a boyhood friend, Thomas Pearce, would ride his bike to my place to play horseshoes. We played a lot, though I have no memory of who won most games. I know, however, who threw the most powerful shoe.

That would be my sister, Brenda. One day she and I were playing a spirited game. We would toss our shoes, and walk down to the other stake to see who got points. That's how singles go. Then a fateful moment arrived.

A shoe slipped from Brenda's hand and ended up halfway between the stakes. I walked on down to pick up my shoes. Not Brenda, without looking she picked up the errant shoe and slung it again. Had you been there you would have heard a clunk ring out.

Now had that been one of today's regulation shoes I might have ended up in the hospital. I didn't even need stitches, fortunately. Brenda was sorry, of course, but that did little to stop the bleeding. Looking back, I owe her thanks. A knock in the head can do some good. I do believe that.

Maybe we need to put horseshoe pits all over the place. Let a few errant throws do their magic. But, and this is vital, we need old lightweight horseshoes made by a blacksmith like Cap Dunn. Those big heavy ones could send a soul to the next level.

Old oaks, crumbling homes, blacksmiths and how kids amused themselves. .... Once again you've caught me walking down memory lane, and again I realize how lucky I was to grow up when we played outdoors, rather than sit inside with a digital device in our hand.

How many kids today can say they live near a blacksmith?

None, I'd wager. Nary a one. Today when I look over where my boyhood blacksmith lived, I don't see an old shack collapsing into the earth. I see a boyhood spent in the presence of a man who's a rarity today, an honest-to-goodness blacksmith, one who helped me have a lot of fun and saved my skull in the process.

Holiday campaign aims to Light Up Darlington

by Samantha Lyles
Staff Writer
slyles@newsandpress.net

Like so many stories these days, this one started with a Facebook post. Several weeks ago, a lady posted a photo of a small town gleaming with holiday lights and asked, "Wouldn't it be great if Darlington looked like a Hallmark movie?" That casual wish took root with the community, and now – with the holidays upon us - the Light Up Darlington campaign is bringing welcome brightness to the season.

"We felt like Darlington needed some happiness, and nothing makes people happier than Christmas and beautiful Christmas lights," says Harriet Hobbs, president and CEO of the Greater Darlington Chamber of Commerce, and author of that galvanizing Facebook post.

Hobbs says the Chamber has teamed with the City of Darlington, the Beautification Board, local businesses, and citizens like Curtis Boyd to purchase and install new lighted decorations and a new Christmas tree for the Public Square.

With permission from Darlington County, the fountain on the courthouse grounds will provide the base for a reusable 25-foot lighted tree. New lighted wreaths have been installed around the Square, and more decorations and lights are on the way.

The Light Up Darlington campaign is offering local citizens the chance to sponsor lights on the Bradford pear trees around the Square. For a tax-dedictible $100 donation, a lighted tree will be marked in honor of your family, a service member, or in memory of a loved one. Donations will be used to purchase and maintain additional Christmas lights for use at local businesses and in public parks.

"We're trying to raise enough money so we can present every (downtown business) with a really pretty evergreen wreath with a big red velvet bow on it to hang on their door," says Hobbs. "Then we'd collect the wreaths in January and spruce them back up for next year."

Hobbs suggests that ramping up the holiday cheer could also yield bigger shopping and dining receipts for downtown. She hopes that folks who come downtown to see the lights would stick around for a meal, or visit earlier to do some shopping and stay to watch the lights twinkle to life.

"Not only could (the decorations) make our town happier, it could be a revenue generator for our businesses," says Hobbs.

To make a donation to the campaign, visit the Greater Darlington Chamber of Commerce, located at 38 Public Square, or call them at 843-393-2641.

DDRA awards improvement grant

By Samantha Lyles
Staff Writer
slyles@newsandpress.net

Darlington Downtown Revitalization Association (DDRA) presented Palmetto Office Furniture with $1,000 in grant funds Nov. 16, wrapping up another successful year for DDRA's Improvement Incentive Program.

Tommy Ewart, who co-owns the business with wife Frances, said the DDRA grant money might not seem like a lot, but it makes a difference when you're upgrading a property in affordable increments. Palmetto Office Furniture is located in a converted cotton warehouse built in 1904, and their most recent improvements included shoring up the building's support structure and adding a new awning.

"We're going step by step very methodically to help preserve the building so it'll be around for years to come," said Ewart. "That money goes a long way when you're trying to reinvigorate something like this building, which has historical significance for Darlington."

DDRA executive director Lisa Rock said this marked the final business improvement grant for the 2018 cycle, but another $5,000 funding pool will be available in 2019.

"We've given out $5,000 in 2018 and $7,000 since the program started. In connection with all of the projects that have been done, there's been more than $170,000 of investment in the city, based on what (businesses) say their projects were," said Rock.

"($1,000) isn't a lot of money, but it's what we can afford to do, and we want to help folks make downtown and their businesses look better."

Businesses can apply for up to $1,000 (in a 50/50 matching split) to help defray the cost of new signage, awnings, exterior paint, new doors and similar improvements.

Applications are available on DDRA's website, www.buildupdarlington.org

Another resident, Gladys Wingate Jules, told council she was tired of "blatant disorder" and disrespect for the mayor at council meetings. "I've been coming to these meetings for a year now," she told council. "Every one of these meetings has been extremely difficult to sit through. . . . I am extremely disturbed by what I see when I come to council meetings."

"The City Council, the mayor, are totally disrespected," Jules said. "It is just unheard of. . . . I know this is black and white. I don't care what anybody says. It's always been black and white." She told council that "active assistance" from law enforcement officers is needed at council meetings, "because they are that bad."

On another issue, councilwoman Baccus defended her decision to bar Darlington resident and government watchdog Anna DeWitt from a recent meeting of Ward 1 constituents.

DeWitt often shoots video of public meetings, and Baccus said the Ward 1 residents at the meeting "did not want to be on YouTube; they did not want to be on Facebook."

DeWitt told the News & Press that the Ward 1 meeting had been billed as open to all and that Baccus barred her from the meeting on the grounds that she wasn't a Ward 1 resident.

(Earlier, two of the residents who spoke to council took opposite sides on the DeWitt/Baccus conflict. Knapp criticized Baccus: "You said all are welcome. Why did you kick her out?" Jules praised Baccus and criticized DeWitt: "To have someone come in to try to record a community meeting, to me, that lets the other citizens know, 'I shouldn't talk. I shouldn't say anything.'")

Turner Park created in honor of shooting victim

Francis Marion University's Board of Trustees has approved naming a new park on campus after the late Farrah Maxine Turner. Turner, a 2005 FMU graduate, was an investigator with the Florence County Sheriff's Office who was killed during the Oct. 3 shooting tragedy in West Florence. Turner Park will be an intimate and reflective space set amidst the Forest Villa residential apartments on campus. It will include benches, trails, plantings and a distinctive water feature. Darlington resident Sgt. Terrence Carraway also died in the Oct. 3 shootings.

Charter

He said that Butler Charter plans to offer small class sizes, capped at 20 students. Also, the 180-day school year would be structured in an innovative way, with two months on, two weeks off, and a six-week summer break. Reyes said this schedule guards against "summer slide" where students lose knowledge over the three-month vacation. Those two-week breaks serve as "programmatic interims" where students will take part in learning camps staged with local partners like, potentially, Coker College and GSSM.

Reyes asked council members for a resolution of support, which could help when Butler Charter School submits applications for state approval in February. Mayor Mel Pennington agreed, and a resolution could be on the agenda for Hartsville City Council's December meeting.

Also at this meeting, members of two championship teams got a moment in the spotlight. Hartsville's O-Zone baseball team took the 2018 state championship this summer, and the GSSM women's volleyball team won the SCHSL Class-A state championship on Nov. 10 with a victory over Branchville.

Doris Brown Walters

DARLINGTON - Doris Brown Walters, 94, passed away Monday, Nov. 12, 2018. Funeral services were held at 2 p.m. Nov. 16 at Central Baptist Church, with burial following in Grove Hill Cemetery. The family received friends from 6-8 p.m. Thursday at Belk Funeral Home.

Born Dec. 19, 1923, Doris was the daughter of the late John Alexander Brown and Irene Patrick Brown. She retired from James Rivers after more than 30 years. She enjoyed gardening, crocheting, cooking and she enjoyed her favorite holiday, Christmas. She was a member of Central Baptist Church in Darlington.

Surviving are her children, Bobby (Shirley) Hilton Walters of Easley; Patricia "Pat" Andrews of Florence, Judy (Laurie) Hanna of Timmonsville, and Susan Dove of Easley; 14 grandchildren, 25 great-grandchildren, and 18 great-great-grandchildren. Also surviving are her sister, Cora Taylor of Darlington; and a special sister-in-law, Mildred Purvis.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Hilton E. Walters; and all of her siblings with the exception of Cora Taylor.

Memorials may be made to a charity of one's choice.

A guestbook is available online at belkfuneralhome.com.

Carolina Pines says merger will make hospital stronger

LifePoint Health and RCCH HealthCare Partners have completed their merger and will now begin operating as one united company under the LifePoint Health name.

As part of RCCH and now LifePoint, Hartsville's Carolina Pines Regional Medical Center is now connected to an even stronger network of community hospitals, regional health systems, physician practices, outpatient centers and post-acute facilities that spans 30 states. This will give the hospital new opportunities to grow and thrive in the rapidly evolving, competitive healthcare landscape, the hospital said in a news release.

The hospital said that, while there are opportunities ahead, much about how the hospital operates – including dedication to patients, employees, physicians and community – will remain the same, and said it does not anticipate any changes in how patients access the hospital and healthcare providers.

Black Friday safety tips

The unofficial beginning to the holiday shopping season, Black Friday compels many people to get out of bed in the middle of the night in the hopes of landing great deals on gifts for their loved ones.

The competition to find deals on Black Friday can sometimes get heated. As a result, some shoppers have found themselves in unsafe situations in the past.

Many retailers have taken steps to make the atmosphere in their stores on Black Friday less hectic and more consumer-friendly.

Shoppers can follow suit and take the following precautions to ensure this Black Friday is as safe as possible.

• Recognize you might not get everything on your list. Inventory may be limited in regard to sale items on Black Friday. Make a list of the items you hope to buy and where you hope to buy them, ranking each item in terms of importance. Then calmly move from store to store, recognizing that you may not end up with every item on your list. Accepting this ahead of time can make the day seem less hectic and more safe.

• Protect and conceal your purchases. Shoppers might not be as sharp when shopping Black Friday sales in the wee hours of the morning. That could make them more vulnerable to thieves. Protect and conceal purchases at all times. If necessary, bring items to the car after each purchase, making sure to place them in a concealed vehicle trunk where they are not visible to prospective thieves.

• Leave small children at home. While horror stories of Black Friday holiday shoppers stampeding through stores are few and far between, malls may not be the safest places for small children to spend the day after Thanksgiving. Overstressed shoppers running on fumes and long lines at the checkout counters can make things unsafe for small kids and try their patience. Shoppers who plan to shop on Black Friday should leave their small children home with a spouse or relative to avoid accident or injury.

• Park in well-lit areas. Parking can be hard to find on Black Friday. But shoppers should not give in and park far away from stores in poorly lit areas of parking lots. Doing so makes shoppers vulnerable to theft or attack.

• Be attentive in the parking lot. In addition to keeping an eye out for prospective thieves or attackers, Black Friday shoppers should be mindful of motorists in the parking lots. Tired shoppers may be focused on getting home and speed through parking lots. Stay alert to avoid exhausted drivers.

Finding deals might be the ultimate goal of Black Friday, but shoppers also must be mindful of safety when shopping during the unofficial beginning of the holiday shopping season.

Giving thanks for God's beautiful Earth

By Bill holland

Imagine if you were the creator of the Earth with all of its breathtaking beauty and gave each living creature the gift of life.

For every human, you provided a book of your promises which gives a detailed description of how they are to live.

And then, you sent your only son to sacrifice his life and raised him from the dead to redeem the souls of all who would believe.

Your invitation to deliver those who would believe from the bondage of sin and welcome them to live with you in heaven forever is beyond words.

As you patiently wait for the masses to respond, you notice that only a few individuals actually have a desire to know you and even less are showing an appreciation for your offer.

What would you do? Of course, you would be disappointed but you gave them free will to live however they want. You will just have to let them decide their own path.

Even though mankind has the choice to make decisions, I am relieved to know that God rules on his throne, is in total control, and nothing can keep us from His love.

The Bible declares that His mercy endures forever and whether the masses will admit it or not, we are all very fortunate to receive his grace and patience.

I was looking through a world atlas the other day with all the many different places on our planet that are filled with such awe-inspiring beauty and astonishing creatures.

The rain forest of the Congo river basin and the gigantic Sahara Desert that covers nearly a third of the African continent and then on to the wonders of the oceans that are another astonishing realm of bewilderment.

The vastness of nature is overwhelming much like the mysteries of the universe are beyond our imagination and then I noticed the title that said, "Our World" and wondered, is it really?

Yes, the Earth is our habitation in the sense that we are temporarily camped out here and allowed to enjoy everything it has to offer, but in reality, God is the rightful owner and generously gives us the privilege to be an invited guest.

Psalm 24, Verse 1, says, "The Earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof: the world and they that dwell there."

This statement is quite different from the perspective of many humans who have aggressively staked their claim.

It's remarkable how some individuals actually believe a real-estate deed proves they are the rightful owner without humbly considering who gave them the privilege to occupy and use the resources.

How often do we appreciate that each breath of oxygen was created and given by his kindness so that our lungs would not collapse? Every clean glass of water we drink was made by God as a gracious gift to satisfy our bodies' demand for hydration.

The thermostat for the atmosphere is monitored by His hand that we might survive deadly temperature fluctuations and it's His law of gravity that keeps everything perfectly balanced and in place.

Though most humans think they are strong and in control, in reality, we are very fragile and totally dependent on His compassion every moment.

According to the Bible, God is not only the maker of all things but willingly turned mankind loose upon His beautiful paradise even though He realized how uncaring and destructive they can be.

He knew that humanity would pollute, deplete, and ruin His masterpiece with their greed and selfishness. Not only would they abuse it, but many arrogantly deny that He is not the author and designer who spoke it all into existence.

It is so breathtaking to witness whales and elephants moving gracefully with such wonder and magnificence.

The honor to watch a glorious sunrise or to walk along a sun-drenched beach and feel the majestic power of the sea is given for all of us to admire, respect and be grateful for his love.

It's truly sad when humans declare how the Almighty God is not a real person and that everything we see somehow evolved from nothing.

How could anyone not be humbled with a sense of reverence and adoration to this divine architect who is called the Alpha and the Omega? "The sea is His and He made it: and His hands formed the dry land. O come, and let us worship and bow down: let us kneel before the Lord our maker": Psalm 95:5-6.

PETS Of THE WEEk

Pretty pretty Princess is one special girl! She loves people, loves giving kisses and getting affection, and loves playing and romping with other dogs. The only thing this awesome girl doesn't love is not having a home to call her own, and we certainly think she should have one once someone realizes what a gem she is. Princess was turned over to the shelter when her former owner was returning to work and could no longer care for her. Princess was used to living in a home but she hasn't allowed shelter life to dim her happy go lucky demeanor. She enjoys getting petted and loved on but she isn't pushy or demanding. Her tail is wagging almost all the time. Check out this loving sweetheart and see if you don't agree that she is one special girl! 41 pounds; 2-3 years old; hound mix

Maverick loves running and playing with other dogs. Arriving with two other dogs who have already headed home, Maverick is keeping his chin up hoping soon it will be his turn to fill an empty pet position. A smaller framed fellow sporting a reddish brown coat, Maverick would be best suited in a more calm, quiet home (ideally stocked with other dogs) where he can settle in learn the ropes of his new pet job. Maverick is more shy and cautious around people but willing to put on his brave boots and show YOU just how great a companion he can be! 28 lpounds; male; 1-2 years old; Shepherd mix

The Darlington County Humane Society is located 0.5 miles from Darlington Raceway off Highway 151 in Darlington.

Have you lost or found a pet?

If you have lost or found a pet, go online to www.darlingtonhumane.org and click on the link Lost/ Found Pets. You will be directed to the www.thelostpets.com Web site where you can register your missing pet.

You will be able to provide a detailed description of your missing pet, as well as attach a photo. Upon registering your lost pet, an e-mail alert will be sent to the Darlington Shelter's e-mail address. This will allow the Shelter staff to recognize your lost pet should it arrive at the facility.

S.C. storm survivors can get aid from state, federal and voluntary agencies

Hurricane Florence survivors in South Carolina still have time to apply for federal disaster assistance. But you may need help beyond what FEMA can offer. Assistance may be available to individuals and families from other federal, state and volunteer organizations.

State of South Carolina

The S.C. Emergency Management Division serves as a resource for a range of public and private assistance available to Florence survivors. For information, visit scemd.org/recover/get-help.

Cleanup: SCEMD provides information and resources on cleaning up mold, sewage and other contaminants that may have entered the home during the storm's flooding: scemd.org/news/health-and-safety.

Consumer Affairs: The S.C. Department of Consumer Affairs offers the "Recovering from a Disaster" guide, available at www.consumer.sc.gov. Suspected fraud and scams can be reported at the same website (click "Report a Scam") or by calling 844-835-5322.

Food safety: Information about food-related risks and safety tips after a disaster is available at the S.C. Dept. of Health and Environmental Control website at: go.usa.gov/xPVXP.

Federal agencies

Many federal agencies offer support to survivors after a disaster.

Getting the help you need can be as simple as visiting disasterassistance.gov/get-assistance/find-assistance. By answering a few simple questions, you can get a list of agencies and programs specific to your needs.

Low-interest disaster loans for businesses, homeowners and renters The U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) is the primary source of federal funds for businesses and individuals affected by disasters. One of FEMA's federal partners in disaster recovery, the SBA offers low-interest disaster loans to businesses of all sizes as well as homeowners and renters.

The loans may cover repairs, rebuilding and the cost of replacing lost or disaster-damaged real estate and personal property. Homeowners or renters who do not qualify for an SBA loan still may be eligible for additional assistance from FEMA.

Survivors must first register for federal assistance at disasterassistance.gov and, if referred to SBA, should complete and return the SBA application by Nov. 20, the physical property damage deadline.

Once an SBA loan application is approved, survivors may be eligible to borrow additional funds to cover the cost of improvements that will protect survivor's property against future damage (mitigation). Examples include elevating utilities, water heaters and furnaces, and installing retaining walls and sump pumps. Applicants may be eligible for an SBA loan increase, for mitigation purposes, of up to 20 percent of their physical damages.

For more information about SBA loans, call SBA's Disaster Assistance Customer Service Center at 800-659-2955 (TTY 800-877-8339), email disastercustomerservice@sba.gov, or visit sba.gov/disaster. Applicants may also apply online using the Electronic Loan Application (ELA) via SBA's secure website at https://disasterloan.sba.gov/ela.

Internal Revenue Service (IRS): The IRS has extended the deadlines that apply to filing returns, paying taxes, and performing certain other time-sensitive acts for certain taxpayers affected by Hurricane Florence. The extension applies to deadlines (either an original or extended due date) that occurred on or after Sept. 7, 2018 and before Jan. 31, 2019. Visit the IRS page called Help for Victims of Hurricane Florence in South Carolina at go.usa.gov/xPVZq.

U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD): Two HUD programs may ease the financial pressure of financing housing and repairs in disaster areas:

Mortgage Insurance for Disaster Victims: helps survivors finance a new home or rebuild their damaged one. To qualify, survivors must own a one-family home damaged by Hurricane Florence and live in a county designated in the federal declaration. Information on mortgage insurance can be found online at go.usa.gov/xPVB8.)

Rehabilitation Mortgage Insurance: helps home buyers and owners finance both the purchase of a house and cost of its rehabilitation through a single mortgage or to finance the rehabilitation of their existing home. For less extensive repairs, a limited program permits home buyers and owners to finance up to $35,000 of their mortgage to repair, improve, or upgrade their home. Information on Rehabilitation Mortgage Insurance can be found online at go.usa.gov/xPVB5.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA): The EPA website provides extensive guidance on dealing with debris and damaged buildings. For information, visit go.usa.gov/xPVBR.

The Heritage Emergency National Task Force (HENTF): Co-sponsored by the Smithsonian Institution and FEMA, HENTF partners with 58 organizations and government agencies to help people and institutions protect and salvage their valuable heirlooms, family treasures and documents. Two useful HENTF fact sheets are: Salvaging Water-Damaged Family Valuables and Heirlooms, available online at go.usa.gov/xPVWC After the Flood: Advice for Salvaging Damaged Family Treasures, available online at go.usa.gov/xPVW8

For more information visit the HENTF website: cultural-rescue.si.edu/hentf.

FEMA Hazard Mitigation: Find online publications about making your home more weather-resistant: Protecting Your Home and Property from Flood Damage, available online at go.usa.gov/xPVWm; and Against the Wind: Protecting Your Home from Hurricane and Wind Damage, available online at go.usa.gov/xPVWF.

Voluntary agencies

You can find a list of disaster relief organizations with information on obtaining resources, volunteering and donating to relief efforts at scemd.org/recover/volunteer-and-donate.

Repairs and Cleanup: Call the United Way Association of South Carolina at 800-451-1954 for free help with debris cleanup and removal by local relief agencies.

Disaster Fraud Hotline: After a disaster, scam artists, identity thieves, and other criminals often attempt to take advantage of vulnerable survivors. Report any suspicious activity to the National Center for Disaster Fraud hotline at 866-720-5721.

Find Local Help: Anyone with unmet needs as a result of storms and flooding should call 2-1-1 to inquire about what local aid might be available.

Disaster Distress Helpline: The helpline is available 24 hours daily to provide counseling to anyone who is seeking help in coping with Hurricane Florence.

Call 800-985-5990 (844-889-4357 TTY). Multilingual operators are available. Press 2 for Spanish. Text "TalkWithUs" (for Spanish "Hablanos") to 66746 or visit Samsha.gov/find-help.

If you have questions about FEMA registration or have serious needs and have not yet registered for assistance, call the FEMA Helpline (voice, 711 or relay service) at 800-621-3362 (TTY users should call 800-462-7585) or visit disasterassistance.gov.

Multilingual operators are available.

If you registered for disaster assistance with FEMA, stay in touch. If your address or phone number changes, update that information with FEMA.

Missing or erroneous information could result in delays getting a home inspection or in receiving assistance.

For more on Hurricane Florence and South Carolina recovery, visit the S.C. Emergency Management Division website at scemd.org, on social media (@SCEMD on Twitter, Facebook and Instagram), or FEMA's Hurricane Florence disaster webpage at www.fema.gov/disaster/4394, or Facebook at www.facebook.com/FEMA, and the FEMA Region 4 Twitter account at twitter.com/FEMARegion4.

SBA extends physical damage application deadline

The U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) has extended the deadline to apply for physical disaster damages in South Carolina. Businesses and individuals with physical damages caused by Hurricane Florence from Sept. 8 through Oct. 8 should apply for SBA low-interest disaster loans before the Dec. 5 deadline.

The disaster declaration covers the counties of Chesterfield, Darlington, Dillon, Florence, Georgetown, Horry, Marion and Marlboro in South Carolina, which are eligible for both Physical and Economic Injury Disaster Loans from the SBA.

Small businesses and most private nonprofit organizations in the following adjacent counties are eligible to apply only for SBA Economic Injury Disaster Loans: Berkeley, Charleston, Clarendon, Kershaw, Lancaster, Lee, Sumter and Williamsburg in South Carolina; and Anson, Brunswick, Columbus, Richmond, Robeson, Scotland and Union in North Carolina.

SBA disaster loans are available to businesses of all sizes, most private nonprofit organizations, homeowners and renters to cover uninsured losses from the disaster.

Interest rates are as low as 3.675 percent for businesses, 2.5 percent for private nonprofit organizations, and 2.0 percent for homeowners and renters. Loan terms can be up to 30 years.

Economic injury disaster loans are also available to provide disaster related working capital to small businesses and most private nonprofit organizations.

These working capital loans may be used to pay fixed debts, payroll, accounts payable and other bills that could have been paid had the disaster not occurred.

To be considered for all forms of disaster assistance, applicants should register online at DisasterAssistance.gov or download the FEMA mobile app.

If online or mobile access is unavailable, applicants should call the FEMA toll-free helpline at 800-621-3362. Those who use 711-Relay or Video Relay Services should call 800-621-3362.

Applicants may apply online using the Electronic Loan Application (ELA) via the SBA's secure website at DisasterLoan.sba.gov.

Hartsville shakes shaky start and runs past Bearcats

By Drake Horton
Contributing Writer

The Hartsville Red Foxes completed a sound defeat of the Brookland-Cayce Bearcats this past Friday night at home to advance to third round of the 4A football playoffs, but the path to that victory was anything but sound.

"The playoffs, it's about surviving and moving forward," Hartsville head coach Jeff Calabrese said. "I certainly don't think we played our best football, but you have to find a way to win the game and that is what we did tonight. We're fortunate and blessed to have another week and hopefully correct some mistakes to be better. We can't keep playing this way and expect to win, but we found a way and that showed some character and I'm proud of that."

In actuality, it was as if the Red Foxes took on the persona of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde on their way to a 68-35 victory.

"In the first half I don't know if we could have played much worse and the kids had to look themselves in the mirror and decide what they wanted to do in the second half," Calabrese said. "The second half wasn't perfect; we still turned the ball over, we still shot ourselves in the foot, we still made some bad decisions both offensively and defensively, but we found a way to have more than they had."

Hartsville committed five turnovers in the game and the Bearcats capitalized, turning four of those five turnovers into touchdowns. Three of the four scores came in the first half, propelling Brookland-Cayce to a 28-21 lead at the half.

Down, but not out, Hartsville came out explosive in the second half, outscoring the Bearcats 47-7. Trailing by seven to start the third quarter Dariyan Pendergrass tied the game up with a five-yard touchdown at the 7:23 mark, and from there the Red Foxes' offense began to pick up steam.

After trailing for over two quarters Hartsville finally took the lead a minute and 20 seconds later when quarter Tiyon Evans' connected with J.D. Pendergrass for a 37-yard touchdown on just a one-play drive and never looked back.

On Hartsville's very next possession Evans showed off his playmaking ability again, running in from 51 yards out for the score on another one-play drive.

But with the good comes the bad and with a player like Evans that is just something a team has to accept. While Evans finished the night with three rushing touchdowns and two passing touchdowns, he did throw two picks, one that was returned for a touchdown, and fumble once.

Brookland-Cayce actually scored a touchdown following all three of Evans' turnovers with the interception being a returned for the touchdown, the other interception setting up drive that resulted in a 53-yard touchdown reception, and the fumble turning into a 25-yard touchdown reception on the ensuing drive.

Hartsville is not a one-man show, however, as the Red Foxes have a stable of backs that are more than capable of producing and did produce against the Bearcats. Dariyan Pendergrass had two scores while Collins Bishop, Lacy Josey and Darian Mcmillan each had one.

Defensive end Demonte Capehart even joined in on Hartsville's scoring action, recovering a Brookland-Cayce fumble and returning it 85 yards for the touchdown with just 2:30 left in the game.

Hartsville takes on North Augusta at home this Friday with the winner advancing to the lower-state championship game.

School concert raises $30,000 for families of officers

Trinity-Byrnes Collegiate School raised over $30,000 at a benefit concert Nov. 15 in the Sonoco gymnasium on the school's campus in Darlington. Students planned the "Titans Back the Blue" event to raise funds for the families of the fallen and wounded law enforcement officers in the Oct. 3 incident in Florence.

The evening began with singers from Cornerstone Baptist Church and Round O Missionary Baptist Church performing contemporary Christian songs. Pastor Lacie Jones, the school's chaplain, served as the speaker and Master of Ceremonies. Upper school students joined together in duets and small groups to perform songs such as "Let It Be," "Lean on Me" and "Hallelujah."

Head of School Ed Hoffman said it was important for the school to follow the students' lead and hold the concert. "We wanted to do something positive," he said. "Something to give back to the community and to raise funds to help the families that were in need."

Admission tickets, T-shirt sales and private donations contributed to the success of the event. The majority of the student body had ordered the event shirts and wore them to school Thursday in support of the benefit.

All proceeds raised will go to assist the families of slain Sgt. Terrence Carraway and Investigator Farrah Turner and wounded Deputy Arie Davis, Investigator Sarah Miller, Officer Brian Hart, Officer Travis Scott and Officer Scott Williamson.

Coker field hockey coach honored

Coker College Head Field Hockey Coach Kat Heterbring highlighted the conference awards by being named the 2018 South Atlantic Conference Carolinas Field Hockey Coach of the Year.

In addition, five Cobras were named to the all-conference teams. Simcha de Vilder and Carla Deuble garnered first team honors, while Alyssa Baronella-O'Toole, Amelia Gajewski, and Kelly Mason were named to the honorable mention team.

Heterbring led Coker's first-year program to an unprecedented 6-6 overall record, including a 5-5 mark in conference play during the regular season. Under Heterbring's leadership, the Navy and Gold knocked off the tenth ranked team in NCAA Division II at the time, defeating Limestone 1-0 on Nov. 7.

The Cobras earned the fourth seed in the inaugural South Atlantic Conference Field Hockey Championships with Heterbring at the helm. Coker will take on the first seeded Limestone Saints in the semifinals on Friday, Nov. 16 at 4 PM. This is Heterbring's second Coach of the Year honor, as she was named the NEAC Coach of the Year in 2016 as the head coach at Wells College.

De Vilder has been the anchor of the Cobras stout defense this season that allowed the second fewest goals in the conference with 28. The freshman from Amstelveen, Noord-Holland had one shot on goal and a defensive save during the regular season. De Vilder is the daughter of Ronald de Vilder and Daphne Kellerman.

Deuble has been pivotal to the Cobras on offense and defense this season. The freshman from Ulm, Germany has five goals (10th in conference), four assists (7th in conference), 14 points (10th in conference), and one game-winning goal (7th in conference). Deuble has started in all 12 matches for Coker. She is the daughter of Antje and Thomas Deuble, and is majoring in business administration.

Baronella-O'Toole has been an integral piece to Coker's offense this year. The junior from Severn, Maryland is second in the conference in assists with six, and has added two goals for a total of 10 points. She is the daughter of Amy and Gary O'Toole.

She has started in all 12 games for Coker.

Gajewski has been a force for the Navy and Gold on the offensive end, and leads the Cobras in goals with nine and points with 19.

Her mark in goals is good for fourth in the conference, while her total in points comes in at sixth in the conference. The junior from Collins, New York also added one assist to her regular season stat line. Gajewksi was named the South Atlantic Conference Carolinas AstroTurf Field Hockey Offensive Player of the Week for matches played during the week of Sept. 24 through Sept. 30.

During that week, Gajewski led the Cobras to their first field hockey victory in over 40 years, with a 4-2 win over Converse in South Atlantic Conference Carolinas action. The midfielder netted a hat trick, scoring three goals for six points on three shots.

Gajewski is the daughter of Steve and Ann Marie Gajewski. She is majoring in psychology at Coker.

Mason was another standout for the Cobras on the offensive side of the field. The junior from Canastota, New York finished second on the team in points (16), goals (9), and assists (4). Mason capped off an impressive month of October by being named the SPC Credit Union Student-Athlete of the Month at Coker.

Clemson-based project aims to transform Southeastern feed grain industry

CLEMSON - A concept born out of research from Clemson University's Advanced Plant Technology (APT) Program is taking shape as a company that seeks to revolutionize regional agriculture by building a feed grain pipeline through the Southeast.

The company, Carolina Seed Systems, is working to address a lack of feed grain hybrid crop development and a regional feed shortage by creating a grower-focused company to take advantage of South Carolina's unique environment to maximize crop productivity.

"Most of the seed companies are out in the Midwest, the Heartland," said Zachary Brenton, Advanced Plant Technology alumnus and founder and chief executive officer of Carolina Seed Systems.

"Sorghum companies are mainly in west Texas, and that's just not an appropriate environment to breed sorghum for the Southeast. So what we're trying to do is leverage our unique environment so that we can ultimately increase crop yield and grower profitability, which in turn gives us the ability to also affect profit on the producer side of the animal industry in South Carolina."

Grain sorghum is a cereal grain that is often used as a substitute for corn and feeding rations in the animal industry. Because it is highly tolerant to drought and also efficient in its nutrient use, grain sorghum is a highly sustainable crop option for farmers that lowers their seed cost and increases their profitability.

As graduate students in Clemson's APT Program, Brenton and Richard Boyles evaluated grain sorghum characteristics and began working to exploit natural variations in the plant's genetic material to determine what genes are responsible for adapting it to the climate in South Carolina and the southeastern United States.

After completing their Ph.D. work, Boyles took a job as a research scientist at Clemson's Pee Dee Research and Education Center in Florence, while Brenton left to pursue Carolina Seed Systems, which has licensed the intellectual property from Clemson through the Clemson University Research Foundation (CURF).

"Carolina Seed Systems is an excellent example of the student entrepreneurial culture here at Clemson University," CURF Executive Director Chris Gesswein said. "The technical acumen and business instincts behind these guys is impressive. It's a real joy to work with graduates who exhibit dedication, work ethic and tenacity in translating their academic research endeavors into a high-potential commercial enterprise. We appreciate the opportunity to facilitate and participate in these Clemson spinout opportunities."

Boyles said the concept for the company is "a vertically integrated supply chain," meaning that both the university and Carolina Seed Systems would be integrated into the entire process from start to finish to best meet the needs of both ends of the supply chain — from grower to end-user.

"Basically, from the start when the seed goes into the ground to that end product, whether it goes into an animal or whether it goes into human food or any other products, we want to be involved in some capacity," he said. "That allows us to stay in tune with what each sector of the supply chain is looking for, what their challenges are and then also how can we best fit into it and get better science and technology from the university out to companies like Carolina Seed Systems so that they can develop better products ultimately for the growers."

The goal of the APT Program — part of Clemson's Institute of Translational Genomics — is to improve agriculture in South Carolina one field at a time by employing translational, problem-solving science to advance crop agriculture in the state.

Because of the globalization and consolidation of the seed industry, South Carolina and the southeastern U.S. are underserved as a production region of critical importance to both row-crop and animal industries in the 21st century.

APT is a key part of an overall effort at Clemson to optimize plants for production in South Carolina and the Southeast for all agricultural stakeholders — from large-scale producers to small-scale landowners who work with heirloom varieties for restaurants, brewers and more.

Stephen Kresovich, director of the Clemson Institute of Translational Genetics and the APT Program, said Carolina Seed Systems is optimized to serve this regional niche.

Grain sorghum is a cereal grain that is often used as a substitute for corn and other feed in the animal industry. Because it is highly tolerant to drought and also efficient in its nutrient use, grain sorghum is a highly sustainable crop option for farmers that lowers their seed costs and increases their profitability. CLEMSON UNIVERSITY

"Carolina Seed Systems represents a product of the vision, innovation, technology and commitment of Clemson's Advanced Plant Technology Program to the agricultural stakeholders of South Carolina," said Kresovich, who also is the Robert and Lois Coker Trustees Endowed Chair of Genetics in Clemson's plant and environmental sciences department.

Kresovich said Carolina Seed Systems would provide cutting-edge science and technology to advance crop agriculture in the Southeast.

"The vision and skills of Brenton and Boyles are uniquely targeted to turning advanced genomic and computational sciences into useful products for the farmers and consumers of the state," Kresovich said. "Though grain sorghum for the regional animal industries is the initial product of Carolina Seed Systems, the real value to South Carolina agriculture is it will serve as a flexible 21st century agricultural technology company specifically serving the priorities of crop agriculture."

Tim Lust, CEO of the National Sorghum Producers and United Sorghum Checkoff, said that the success of this program is delivering regionally adapted grain sorghum hybrids to farmers.

"Typically, the sorghum seed industry focuses breeding efforts in areas where more sorghum is produced in states such as Kansas and Texas, leaving potential growth areas such as the mid-Atlantic without diverse hybrid choices. Carolina Seed Systems has an opportunity to match local grain demand with tailored hybrids, which will increase grain sorghum productivity and, most importantly, increase on-farm profitability for sorghum producers."

Steve Johnson, regional manager of the South Carolina Research Authority (SCRA), which supported the pilot production of the product through grant funding, said SCRA views Carolina Seed Systems as the "next generation" of agriculture in the state.

"While ag products have long been a major component of South Carolina's economy, we were limited to planting cultivars developed by large conglomerate companies whose headquarters are outside of our state — and whose plants were not necessarily 'designed' for the unique growing conditions here," Johnson said. "Carolina Seed Systems is changing that, developing hybrid cultivars that have high nutrition value and are specifically intended for South Carolina weather."

Rick Boyles (left) and Zachary Brenton, both of whom completed their Ph.D. work at Clemson University, work with Stephen Kresovich (second from right), director of Clemson's Advanced Plant Technology Program, in a corn field at the Pee Dee Research and Education Center in Florence. Carolina Seed Systems, a company that grew out of Clemson's Advanced Plant Technology Program and has received licensing from the Clemson University Research Foundation, is working to address a lack of feed grain hybrid crop development and a regional feed shortage by creating a grower-focused company to take advantage of South Carolina's unique environment to maximize crop productivity. CLEMSON UNIVERSITY

Johnson also noted that Carolina Seed Systems is developing its products without being a genetically modified organism (GMO) product.

"SCRA has invested grant funding into Carolina Seed Systems because ultimately this will create new, higher-paying jobs in our state and build South Carolina's reputation for innovation and entrepreneurship," he said.

Brenton added: "Carolina Seed Systems has gotten support also from the South Carolina Research Authority because multiple state entities across South Carolina view this as an opportunity to improve the mission of the S.C. Department of Agriculture of hitting $50 billion dollars of economic impact by 2020. So it's not just the grants that we receive; it's really the support that Clemson and the vision of APT program that are the driving support of this."

And while increasing crop productivity and limiting the environmental impacts of agriculture, the ultimate goal of the company is to increase the number of feed grains available to end-users by working with growers to create better product lines.

"The Carolinas import about 300 million bushels of grain sorghum per year," Brenton said. "Rather than having that come through the ports of Wilmington or Charleston or railed in from the Midwest, we're trying to make our acreage more productive so that our growers can take advantage of that revenue. It's a local agricultural play to help growers achieve their maximum profitability. And that's addressing the growing challenges that we have facing world agriculture."

Carolina Seed Systems saw grain sorghum as the first opportunity and used the Clemson APT Program to explore it, but the company has plans to diversify its product line and provide other opportunities for growers in the future.

"The vision of Carolina Seed Systems and even here at Clemson University, we're not just working on sorghum, but also any crop that's a good fit for the state, for the region and elsewhere," Boyles said.

It only stands to reason that growing sorghum or any other crop closer to its end-user improves sustainability by decreasing transport costs and the environmental impacts associated with it while at the same time lowering costs for the end user — improving the bottom line for both the grower and end user.

"The whole mission of the APT program is to spin out products for growers," Brenton said. "But we can only achieve that mission with the foundation of Clemson and the research they provide, whether that's the supercomputer, whether that's the genetic technology or whether that's the research infrastructure at the various research and education centers across the state.

"APT is the driving force on this at Clemson, and they're looking for opportunities and commercial partners, not just CSS, but anybody that wants to pursue that to the benefit of a South Carolina agriculture. So we think it's a critical component of the land-grant mission at Clemson."

Dad, twins have 'identical' stories

Courtesy of Fort Jackson

COLUMBIA -- Identical twins are following in their dad's footsteps at Fort Jackson. Both graduated as drill sergeants last month at Fort Jackson, where their father became a drill sergeant and later deputy commandant.

Randy Moorman, of Wrightsville, Ga,. was deputy commandant at Fort Jackson's Drill Sergeant Academy from 2001 through 2003. Two of his daughters, Staff Sgts. Natasha and Natisha Moorman, identical twins born in Baumholder, Germany -- where Moorman was stationed at the time -- are on his heels.

By apparent chance, the family has created a legacy at Fort Jackson. Moorman met his wife, Linda, on post. She works with military records at Fort Jackson. Like father, like daughters, all three went through Basic Combat Training and the Academy here.

Moorman was 29 when he went on the trail, and the twins are 28. Natasha and Natisha are soon to return to Fort Jackson. They will report back to the installation Nov. 26 to serve as drill sergeants in the 193rd Infantry Brigade.

Natisha said returning to Fort Jackson is like "coming back home." It's a "weird feeling," she added, calling it "bittersweet."

She said it's good to be back with family, but little travel and long days are ahead.

Moorman attended Fort Jackson's Drill Sergeant Academy when he was assigned to the trail years ago, after originally enlisting in 1976. One decade later, in 1998, he returned to the company he drilled for as a first sergeant. After that, he became deputy commandant of the Academy.

Hearing from his daughters brought back memories. He said the process of becoming a drill sergeant has remained largely the same, even after all these years. He thinks it was "a little tougher" back then.

His daughters couldn't disagree. "I can see that," Natisha said, but added, "to us, it was still tough."

Natasha said the difficulty of the Academy today is probably more suitable for their generation. Moorman helped them through their training.

"I had a lot of advice," he said. In preparation, he practiced modules with them. "He broke (the modules) all down," Natasha added.

Natisha said he helped make sure everything went smoothly during their stressful Academy days. "I'm so proud of them … they did really well," he said.

The sisters said their father helped them know discipline at an early age. He instilled military values as they grew up. "I was very strict," he said.

The Army and Moorman's current position as deputy sheriff of probate court and family court in Columbia influenced his parenting style. Randy said he didn't want them to end up in the same position as some of the kids he sees in the judicial system.

Born in the South in 1950, Randy joined the Army at 17 to get away from racial tension. He was tired of being witness to the shootings and violence commonplace in his rural hometown.

In the Army, it was different, he said.

"We had to work together, become one," he said. "You see people for who they are … it grew on me."

Tasks like cleaning barracks brought everyone together, race aside, he added.

Natasha and Natisha had different reasons for signing up. Their dad played a role in the decision. Natasha said the lifestyle the Army provided their Family influenced her to give the military a shot.

She also joined to travel and experience new things -- that was nearly eight years ago.

Natisha enlisted roughly one year after, inspired by her sister. "She was doing great things," Natisha said. Natisha left college and made the leap into the Army.

Soon they will be stationed together for the first time ever here at Fort Jackson. Some identical twin pranks may be soon to come.

FMU Trustees approve new mechanical engineering program

Francis Marion University is on the way to adding a second engineering degree program to its growing repertoire, part of a dynamic expansion of the University's academic programming.

FMU's Board of Trustees approved the addition of an undergraduate mechanical engineering degree at their quarterly meeting Thursday.

The program requires additional regulatory approval, but pending the successful navigation of those processes, students could begin matriculating in the new program as soon as the 2019-2020 school year, with the first graduates following a few years after that.

Like FMU's industrial engineering degree, which the University started in 2014, mechanical engineering is a direct response to input from business and industry leaders in the area. It also offers yet another meaningful, professional career path to FMU students, says Dr. Fred Carter, FMU's president.

"Mechanical engineering will be a superb addition to FMU's curriculum," Carter says. "Like many of the new degree programs we've created in the past decade, it represents a wonderful pairing of demonstrated workforce demand and relevant career offerings for our students. We're looking forward to seeing it move through the regulatory process and come to fruition."

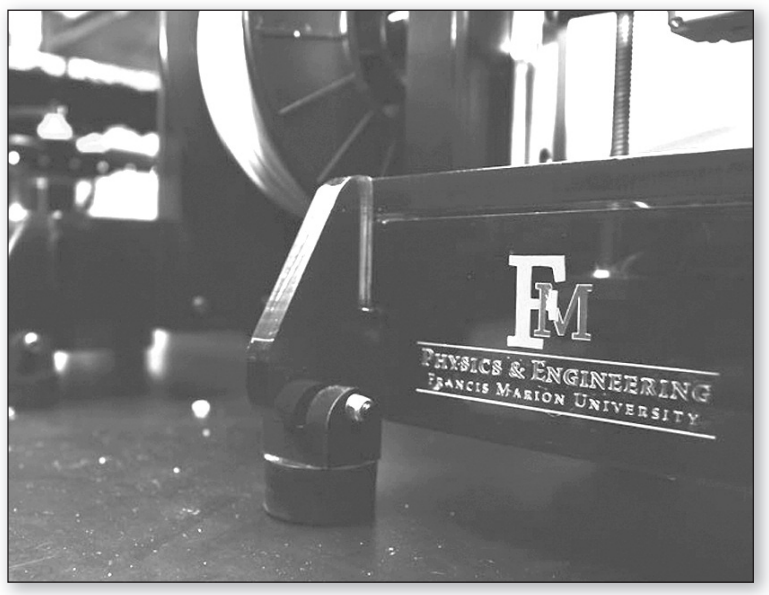
FMU's industrial engineering program has seen great success and growth since it began. Every graduate of the program to date was hired to a job in the field before graduation, and the program has grown every year since inception.

Carter notes that the program is a natural outgrowth of FMU's business and physics programs, whose graduates have fueled business growth in the region for years. Mechanical engineering also complements industrial engineering in a number of ways and represents to the perfect sequential step for FMU's Department of Physics and Engineering.

Mechanical engineering is the second of three planned engineering programs at FMU. An electrical engineering program is likely to follow mechanical in the pipeline during the next few years.

Also at Thursday's meeting, Carter said that he had asked the provost's office to put together a feasibility study for a master's level degree program in Environmental Sciences. The program makes sense, Carter said, because of FMU's strong tradition in the sciences; and because of its location in a critical, multi-state watershed.

The program would be housed in FMU's Department of Biology.



As tuitions rise, S.C. colleges, universities lay out funds for lobbyists

By Rick Brundrett
The Nerve

Since 2015, state colleges and universities have paid a total of more than $1.5 million to lobbyists – mainly to influence S.C. lawmakers – while overall student tuition and school debt loads have steadily increased, a review by The Nerve found.

Lobbying reports filed with the State Ethics Commission show that from Jan. 1, 2015, through May of this year, 13 colleges and universities, including several technical colleges, collectively paid at least $1,532,550 to in-house and outside lobbyists.

The state's three main research universities – the University of South Carolina, Clemson and Medical University of South Carolina – recorded the three highest total amounts of lobbyist payments for the period, accounting for more than half of the overall total.

Those universities also have among the highest tuition costs for in-state undergraduate students, S.C. Commission on Higher Education records show.

Ask why Clemson needs lobbyists, university spokesman Mark Land told The Nerve: "Clemson, like most public universities across the nation, engages regularly with state government officials on a wide variety of topics from state funding to academic programming to economic engagement to health and safety issues and more. As a state institution, Clemson also has a need to inform lawmakers and state agencies on the impact of proposed legislation."

Lobbyist payments reflect only part of what's spent by colleges and universities to curry favor with lawmakers and other officials. Clemson, for example, has a six-person "Office of Governmental Affairs" housed in a high-rise office building across the street from the State House. The total annual cost of rent, parking and storage for that location is $77,740, "of which 25 percent is apportioned to governmental relations," Land said.

Three of the Clemson's six staffers are registered lobbyists with the Ethics Commission, including Angie Leidinger, vice president for external affairs, whose annual salary with the university is $248,018, according to the state salary database. In contrast, the university reported $10,035 in total lobbyist payments to her in the first five months of this year, Ethics Commission records show.

Under state law, those payments are supposed to reflect time spent "promoting or opposing" specified legislative, gubernatorial or agency matters "through direct communication with public officials or public employees." Lobbyists can be paid hourly, per project or per legislative session, according to Courtney Laster, the Ethics Commission's general counsel.

Joren Bartlett, director of governmental relations for the 16-school S.C. Technical College System, serves as "our liaison with state, local and federal delegations," though she is not a lobbyist because she does not "directly ask lawmakers to support or oppose legislation," agency spokeswoman Kelly Steinhilper told The Nerve. Bartlett's annual salary is $109,457, according to the state salary database.

But a separate group known as the South Carolina Association of Technical College Commissioners has a lobbyist, Ethics Commission records show. And three colleges in the Technical College System – Florence-Darlington Technical College, Greenville Technical College and Horry-Georgetown Technical College – have separately paid lobbyists since 2015.

Besides that, the Midlands Technical College Foundation and Trident Technical College Foundation – private, nonprofit fundraising arms for those schools – made lobbyist payments over the period, records show.

A state budget proviso enacted for fiscal 2011-2012 and renewed annually bans state agencies from using general funds to pay their own employees to lobby or enter into contracts with outside lobbyists, though it doesn't prohibit agencies from using "other" funds – college tuition, for example – for those purposes.

Under state law, tuition and other student fees can be used by public colleges and universities to pay off certain bonds that typically are issued for construction projects. The Nerve reported in August that the total debt incurred by mostly four-year public schools skyrocketed nearly 93 percent to $2 billion from fiscal 2008 through fiscal 2017, and that over the past 10 years at four-year schools, tuition and required fees for in-state undergraduates jumped by about 40 percent on average.

The school debt load per full-time student, including graduate students, averaged $17,583 as of June 30, 2017 – a nearly 60 percent hike from fiscal 2008, Commission on Higher Education (CHE) records show.

At USC – the state's largest university – the total school debt load per full-time student was $14,623 for the main campus and medical school, according to CHE records. Its annual tuition and required fees last school year for in-state undergraduates at the main Columbia campus was $12,262, excluding the law, medical and pharmacy schools.

In comparison, in-state undergraduate tuition and required fees last school year totaled $14,712 at Clemson and $13,917 at MUSC, excluding the medicine, dentistry and pharmacy schools, CHE records show. The total school debt load per full-time student at those universities was $26,309 and $23,153, respectively, as of June 30, 2017.

And individual loan debt for South Carolina college and university students remains a heavy burden. A recent study by the career website Zippia found that the Palmetto State leads the nation in the highest median debt ($26,563) for graduates of public and private nonprofit schools.

'Willfully' violated law

Ethics Commission records show that since 2015, USC has made a total of nearly $273,000 in lobbyist payments, including payments to four members of the Columbia office of the McGuireWoods Consulting firm.

The lobbyists include Billy Boan, a former longtime S.C. House member and budget director under former Gov. Jim Hodges, who heads the consulting firm's Columbia office.

Derrick Meggie also is a registered lobbyist for USC. His annual university salary is $162,000 as the director of state government relations and adjunct faculty member, according to the state salary database.

Boan isn't the only college or university lobbyist for with strong ties to the S.C. Legislature. For example, Shirley Hinson, a registered lobbyist for the College of Charleston and the college's $96,846 director of government relations, is a former longtime House member.

USC's lobbying efforts were partly the focus of a first-ever state grand jury report on public corruption involving the General Assembly, released by special prosecutor David Pascoe, the solicitor for Orangeburg, Calhoun and Dorchester counties.

The report concluded that "probable cause exists" that the university "willfully violated" state lobbying law by "failing to disclose" longtime political consultant Richard Quinn Sr. as "its lobbyist."

As part of the released grand jury report, USC admitted no wrongdoing in a "Corporate Integrity Agreement," which requires the university to pay $90,000 to the state, amend its 2012 and 2013 lobbying filings with the Ethics Commission, and "appoint or designate a compliance officer who shall be responsible for ensuring" that it "accurately reports its lobbying activities" to the commission.

No current or former USC officials, including president Harris Pastides, faced criminal charges related to the state grand jury probe.

All charges were dropped against Quinn Sr., though his business pleaded guilty to failure to register as a lobbyist as part of a plea deal.

Following is a breakdown of total lobbyist payments reported by colleges and universities to the Ethics Commission from Jan. 1, 2015, through May 31 of this year:

- Clemson*: $325,525
- University of South Carolina main campus: $272,976
- Medical University of South Carolina: $225,885
- Horry-Georgetown Technical College: $133,248
- Lander University: $100,000
- Francis Marion University: $89,763
- Coastal Carolina University: $85,289
- College of Charleston: $83,040
- Winthrop University: $71,988
- Greenville Technical College: $68,000
- Florence-Darlington Technical College: $44,336
- South Carolina State University: $27,000
- USC Upstate branch: $5,500

*Clemson amended its filing for the first five months of this year, lowering its total payments from $151,234 to $68,332.

University spokesman Land told The Nerve that in its "initial submission, we accidentally attributed all of the salaries of our three registered lobbyists earned to direct engagement with state officials, rather than a portion of it as we have always done in the past."

Ethics Commission records show an equal amount in reported lobbyist payments over the period by the Medical University Hospital Authority.

St. John's Elementary's 200th birthday

St. John's Elementary School celebrated its bicentennial with a week of fun activities where students and staff displayed their school pride. The week culminated with two big events: the Taste of St. John's on Nov. 15, where parents and teachers served up their best entrees and sweets, and the Bicentennial Parade, where students joined the Darlington High School Marching Falcons to promenade around the historic Academy Green. Other activities included a concert by the St. John's Singers and the opening of a time capsule, and guest readers from the community visited classrooms to share their favorite children's stories. School board salutes students' achievements

From Staff Reports

Student accomplishments were in the spotlight Nov. 12 during a meeting of the Darlington County School Board that was mostly spent in executive session.

Board members recognized Ethan Drew of Lamar for his first-place win in the S.C. Education Association's "Read Across South Carolina" art contest. When he won the award last spring, he attended Lamar Elementary; now he attends Spaulding Elementary.

In addition, three students at Hartsville High School were honored for winning blue ribbons at the State Fair's student art competition.

Susanna Horton won first place in the 11th-grade 3D division. Mary Hannah Parker won first place in the 12th-grade photography division. Fara James won first place in the two-dimensional division. All three study under art teacher Jennifer Pietrzak.

Hartsville High School senior Emma Charles was honored for winning the S.C. High School League 4A Golf State Championship.

The board also gave quick and routine preliminary approval to a string of school policy changes. The bulk of the meeting was spent in executive session, during which no action was taken, the board said.

The Fourth Turn

Darlington Raceway recently donated Gatorade and thousands of branded products to Darlington High School Athletics.

The one-time donation to the public school's athletic department consisted of 78 cases of Gatorade, equal to 312 gallons. Darlington Raceway also donated 20,000 Gatorade branded cups and hand towels.

"We are more than happy to support the Darlington County School District and their athletic department with this donation," Darlington Raceway President Kerry Tharp said.

"We try to do our part to be good community partners and this is just another way to accomplish that goal."

Darlington High School has an enrollment of more than 1,100 students, and it's located just over two miles from the track. The high school features more than 20 athletic teams for its students to compete in regionally.

"The donation from the Darlington Raceway is a great blessing to our Athletic Department," said Darlington High School Athletics Director Michael Jordan.

"We are very blessed to have the Raceway as a member of the Darlington High School Team. We also received several cases of cups for our student-athletes.

"The community and the business partners that we have lending us their support is essential to our athletic program reaching our goal of becoming one of the best athletic programs in the state."

Gatorade is an official partner of the 1.366-mile track that's owned by the International Speedway Corporation (ISC). Most notably, Gatorade sponsors Victory Lane at the historic facility.

During the Monster Energy NASCAR Cup Series Bojangles' Southern 500 and NASCAR Xfinity Series Sport Clips Haircuts VFW 200 on Labor Day weekend, Darlington Raceway goes through a large amount of Gatorade products. This included products not used during the race weekend.

Trinity-Byrnes gets $15,000 grant

Trinity-Byrnes Collegiate School in Darlington received a $15,000 grant from the Catherine J. McGinnis Family Foundation. The scholarship awards are to be administered by the Head of School, Ed Hoffman.

"Dan and Arlene McGinnis have been a tremendous asset to the Trinity-Byrnes community. The family has been a supporter of our school's excellent educational program," stated Hoffman.

"This scholarship will allow some deserving students an opportunity to attend Trinity-Byrnes Collegiate School," said April Munn, director of admissions for the school.

Also, Trinity-Byrnes received delivery of a new activity bus Nov. 6. The school raised over $75,000 at its annual Beach Blast in August. The remaining funds came from a grant with the USDA for Rural Business Development.

Munn states, "This partnership with the USDA is essential to our continued expansion and growth in the areas of academics, athletics, recruitment and college exploration. We continue to provide multifaceted opportunities for our students as they work toward graduation and college acceptances."

In other news, three Latin students from Trinity-Byrnes Collegiate School and one from White Knoll High School in Lexington traveled to Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, to attend the 2018 National Junior Classical League Convention July 23-28.

Students representing Trinity-Byrnes Collegiate School: Carson Munn, South Carolina Junior Classical League President; Andrew Saverance, SCJCL 1st Vice-President; and Ben Naso, SCJCL Webmaster. Attending from White Knoll High School: Kyle Pelletier.

While at the convention, they competed in a variety of contests including academic, creative arts, graphic arts, Olympika (track, basketball, volleyball, etc.), and the Certamen. The Certamen is a game of fast real of facts related to classical civilizations and its peoples, languages, and cultures.

Josiane Vero, TBCS Latin teacher, states that "attending the convention also allows the students to rekindle old friendships and build new ones." Trinity-Byrnes offers Latin classes from Latin 1 to Latin 5AP in addition to courses in Spanish and French.

New database shows FMU has lowest net cost in S.C.

A new database developed by The State newspaper of Columbia and released this week, shows Francis Marion University has the lowest net cost of attendance of any four-year college or university in South Carolina — public or private.

FMU's most recently reported real net cost — tuition plus other standard college costs, less scholarship aid —was $11,788. That was more than $2,500 less than the next closest university and was half the price of a number of institutions.

The State based its numbers on information gleaned from the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS), which includes financial figures obtained from real families moving through college, as opposed to published tuition figures.

Dr. Fred Carter, FMU's president, says the new data confirms what University leaders have long known.

"For the past two decades we've been very attentive to tuition costs at our university," says Carter. "At the same time we have continued to add substantive new programs that are in high demand by both students and prospective employers. Consequently, our programs have never been more relevant and accessible, and our degrees have never been more valuable. This new database simply validates all that."

The State unveiled the database in a story that detailed the often dramatic differences between tuition and net cost, particularly at private colleges and universities.

FMU's tuition is among the lowest in the state. It has the lowest net cost because it has fewer add-on fees that most university and because its students have historically been able to access more aid.

One arrested in fatal shooting

Darlington County sheriff's deputies are investigating a fatal shooting that took place Saturday night.

About 11:20 p.m., officials said, one person was struck and was driven from the scene to a convenience store parking lot at Timmonsville Highway and Hoffmeyer Road.

That person died from his wounds, officials said.

Darlington County Sheriff Tony Chavis said in a statement: "We, along with the U.S. Marshals task force, have arrested a subject in relation to (the) fatal shooting and we will release more information later."

The victim in the case was identified by the Darlington County coroner's office as Jerome Robinson, 18, of Florence.

Dre Glorvun Nazier Hampton, 19, of Florence has been charged with murder in the slaying, officials said Monday afternoon.

3 injured as car crashes into store

Three people were injured when a car crashed into the Corner Connection store on Cashua Ferry Road in Darlington on Saturday.

Media reports quoted the Darlington Police Department as saying the crash took place when a driver accidentally pushed on the accelerator rather than the brake.

Police said Monday that the driver was a woman in her 70s.

Ann Blackmon, a cashier at the store, told WBTW-TV: "I was behind the counter when the car came in and it ran into (a) man and pressed him up against the counter. Glass was flying everywhere.

"First thing I did was run behind the counter and got out because the car was smoking and I didn't want it to blow up."

The names of the injured were not available at press time Monday.

It was not clear if the driver was among the injured.

Holiday cookies the whole family will love

Many people enjoy baking come the holiday season, and perhaps no dish is more synonymous with holiday baking than cookies. Children leave cookies out for Santa Claus on Christmas Eve, while adults may indulge and enjoy an extra cookie or two at family gatherings or holiday office parties.

Cookies come in all shapes and sizes, so bakers have an array of options at their disposal when planning their holiday menus. Chocolate chip cookies may be among the most popular types of cookies, and bakers who want to capitalize on that popularity while giving loved ones something a little different may want to try the following recipe for "Double Chocolate Chip Cookies" from Maxine Clark's "Chocolate: Deliciously Indulgent Recipes for Chocolate Lovers" (Ryland, Peters & Small).

Double Chocolate Chip Cookies

Makes about 12 large cookies

5 tablespoons unsalted butter, softened
5 tablespoons granulated sugar
5 tablespoons light brown sugar, sifted
1 large egg, beaten
1/2 teaspoon pure vanilla essence or chocolate extract (see note)
1 cup plus 2 tablespoons self-rising flour
3 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa
1/4 teaspoon salt
2/3 cup (or more) dark and white (or milk) chocolate chips (or roughly chopped chocolate)

A heavy, nonstick baking sheet

Preheat the oven to 350 F.

Using an electric mixer, cream the butter and sugars together until pale and fluffy. Beat in the egg and vanilla essence.

Sift the flour with the cocoa and salt in a small bowl. Fold into the egg mixture with the chocolate chips.

Place 4 heaping tablespoonsfuls of the mixture on the prepared baking sheet, spacing them well apart. Press down and spread out to about 1/4-inch thick with the back of a wet spoon or with dampened fingers (you may like to scatter some more chocolate chips over the top). Bake for 10 to 12 minutes. Let cool on the baking sheet for 1 minute, then transfer to a wire rack. When cool, store in an airtight container. Repeat with the remaining mixture.

Note: Chocolate extract is a fat-free flavoring ingredient made from a blend of roasted cacao beans, water and alcohol.
