Darlington County Board of Education discusses future facility needs

With a new superintendent on board, Darlington County School District is looking to the future. Ground was broken for the new Darlington-area school that will combine the populations of Cain and Brunson-Dargan Elementary Schools. New principals are in place at several schools. Now, Dr. Tim Newman wants to know what's next for the district.

During a recent board work session, Newman talked with board members about updating a facilities study done in 2012.

"I spent some time cleaning out my office and I came across the Darlington County School Facilities Study done back in 2012; I believe that was Dr. Knight's last year," Newman said. "I had a chance to start reading through it and it was put together by one of our current architects. I have to tell you, a lot of what is in here made sense, the suggestions and the different possibilities and different scenarios that they were setting up."

Newman said that the facilities study talked about a topic he and the board had been discussing: having a plan for the future.

"If you all recall, for the last few months I've been saying that we need a plan for the next ten years," Newman said. "We're building three schools now but we have fifty and sixty-year-old schools in the district that are going to have to be dealt with. What is our plan? If we don't have a plan, we're going to be in trouble. That plan comes from a facilities study and also a financial scheduling of how that can happen and how that can work over time."

It all began with a handshake and a hamburger steak at Raceway Grill

In a moment of nostalgia, and a little bit of a homecoming, Dale Jarrett stopped by the Raceway Grill on August 30 to talk with fans and share the story of how he became the driver of the 88 car.

"This is a place I've been coming since I was (a small child) and so many things happened around this racetrack, this event," Jarrett said. "Here in 1965, we actually lived in Camden, South Carolina not far from here, my dad ended up winning that race that day, the Southern 500. That was the only Southern 500 for the Jarretts; I didn't have the opportunity to win that. I won here a few times but not the Southern 500."

That race day sticks with Jarrett all these years later, for more than one reason.

"He set a record that day that still stands today; he won the race by 14 laps, which is pretty incredible," Jarrett said. "That was a great day; I remember it. I was excited that my dad won but I was more excited when we got to Victory Lane and Doc and Festus from Gunsmoke were there. That was the coolest thing I had seen and done in my life at that point, for a kid who was nine-years-old."

Fast-forward 30-years from that win and Jarrett himself is behind the wheel.

"In 1995, I was driving the 28 car for Robert Yates," Jarrett said. "I had signed a one-year deal to do that. I was looking to take my, at the time, Busch Grand National Series team and start my own cup team. Robert was going to supply the engines. We had all of these things worked out and just a couple of weeks before we were supposed to show up here, I had a meeting with a sponsor and was getting ready to sign a deal to do that. Ford was trying to get Robert to start a second team. His explanation to Ford was 'When they make Victory Lane big enough for two cars, that's when I'll have a second team.'

As fate would have it, the insistence of Ford would pay off for Jarrett.

"Robert and Ford decided that they were going to have a second team," Jarrett said. "We came into the Raceway Grill on a Friday after qualifying for the Southern 500...we sat down here and ate and discussed what was going to happen, who we were looking at for crew chief."

Jarrett had some ideas but so did Yates.

Williams takes aim at State House and Congress

By Samantha Lyles

slyles@newsandpress.net

SC House Representative Robert Williams (Democrat, District 62) has a lot on his plate these days; he's running for re-election to the General Assembly, and also mounting a challenge to incumbent Republican Congressman Tom Rice for the District 7 US House seat. But Williams says the hard work involved in running two races is worth the effort, as he believes he can ably represent the 7th and bring his dedication and compassion for the less fortunate to bear in Congress.

Williams served in Iraq with the South Carolina Army National Guard, and says his experiences in that war-torn country shaped his perspective and turned his eye toward public service.

"After I got over there and saw the devastation of war, saw the ways it ripped apart people's lives and their communities...it was very moving seeing people trying to live in such tragic conditions. After I got back home and traveled around through some of our communities, I saw a lot of the same conditions. People living with no running water, no electricity - living in poverty. That really drove my interest in getting involved and trying to change things," says Williams.

Following a successful run for the SC House in 2007, Williams continued working with the Fatherhood and Families organization he established around 1999. The entity worked on keeping young dads engaged in their children's lives and strengthening their prospects with employment and education. Now called Family Engagement, Williams says the organization focuses on providing support to the entire family unit.

"We feel if we can address the needs of the child foremost...we can help bring that family out of poverty and get them going in the right direction. But it has to be both parents working together, providing parental guidance and staying involved," says Williams.

He also supported outreach programs in local communities, such as Duke Energy's efforts to shore up energy efficiency in homes of low to moderate income customers. Williams says that with the global temperature steadily rising, such programs are essential to help senior citizens and children from suffering heat-related health issues.

"Our environment is changing. It's getting hotter, and I do believe that has something to do with our behavior. The elderly and the young are the most vulnerable to these conditions, and we need to make plans to help them," Williams says.

During his time in the House, Williams says he is proud to have supported

Groundbreaking ceremony held at Cain Elementary

By Samantha Lyles
Staff Writer
slyles@newsandpress.net

Members of the Darlington community joined the Darlington County Board of Education and DCSD superintendent Tim Newman for an August 28 groundbreaking ceremony to formally kick off construction of a new elementary school.

The new facility will combine Cain Elementary and Brunson-Dargan Elementary into a spacious new school, to be constructed on Cain's First Street campus.

"We're really excited and grateful to be able to start this new elementary school in the Darlington area. It's what's best for our kids, it's what's best for our community, and I can't wait to see the end result," said Newman.

The school is one of three new elementary schools DCSD plans to construct with proceeds from a $60 million bond referendum approved by Darlington County voters in 2016.

The other schools will be located in Hartsville (combining Washington Street and West Hartsville Elementary) and Lamar (combining Spaulding and Lamar Elementary). Construction of these schools should occur on a simultaneous, slightly staggered schedule, with all three set to open around the end of 2019.

The new Cain school will host up to 600 students in kindergarten through fifth grade, and the campus footprint has enough space to add on six more classrooms to accommodate future growth.

Classrooms will feature art and creative spaces, modern technology like smart boards and new lighting, and will provide areas for group projects and collaborative learning - all factors which Newman said will enhance the learning experience. "When you put students in modern spaces that have all the technology, the different areas to learn in, different lighting, different sized corridors, it shows the commitment we have to helping our kids learn in the twenty-first century," said Newman.

Newman added that he hopes the district can use this momentum to continue evaluating and modernizing all of its schools.

"We need to be looking at the next five, ten, twenty years and have the plan in place for all of our buildings. The majority of our buildings are fifty to sixty years old, so we have to put a plan in place because our students deserve to learn in safe, secure, modern buildings," Newman said.

Front Porch Memories

By Bill Shephard

All of the houses that I lived in as a small boy had large front porches. That was true of the houses that made up the mill village where I spent my childhood years. All of the houses had either three or four rooms on the inside, and two porches on the outside. The large front porch was where folk did their visiting and relaxing after a long day's work. That was true at the Shepard's house on the village!

During the early years of my childhood life on a mill village was a simple existence of living and working. Neighborly visits were about the only socializing one did and that happened rarely and on weekends. Workers at the big mill were up at 4:30 a.m. and, after a large breakfast, were off to the mill where they would work twelve long hours! When they returned home a hot meal was usually waiting, and the day was over.

In the summertime when the daylight hours were longer there would be time left for sitting on the front porch and visiting. If other things, such as gardening or feeding the pigs were not in need of doing, Dad would head for the front porch to sit for a while. Mom would hasten to clean the kitchen and put leftover food away, then join Dad on the front porch. I liked those days! Mom would have taken off her kitchen apron, brushed her long hair a little and joined Dad on the big porch. They made a memorable picture sitting side by side in the porch swing. I liked those times best of all. They just didn't seem to happen as often as I liked. It did seem that there was always something else that Dad needed doing outside the house and Mom was equally as busy on the inside! If Mom wasn't washing the clothes and ironing clothes, she was at the old Singer machine sewing! So it was good to see them sitting side-by-side and swinging back and forth.

Often times on Sundays, if we were not visiting relatives in the nearby country, Mom would make a large bucket of lemonade and place it on the front porch where we would all be gathered. Of course that would depend on whether the ice man had visited the village of Friday or Saturday. If a small piece of ice remained, Mom would use it to cool the lemonade.

It would be so good! Usually a neighbor would saunter over, take a seat on the porch and join in on whatever conversation was going on. They were always welcome and if they had children we would play games in the large front yard while the grown-ups talked.

There really wasn't much to talk about in those times. We didn't hear much news. We never had a newspaper, no radio or telephone, so what was left to talk about? Perhaps a new neighbor had moved into the village, or something different had happened at the mill; there was always something to keep the conversation going.

Often a musician with his guitar, or mandolin happened by and would be welcomed to stop and pick and sing awhile. I really enjoyed those times! When that happened large crowds would gather and stay for as long as the musicians would stay. I can still remember the names of some of those early entertainers: Charlie Self and Elvin Baker were two of the frequent visitors. Both were good musicians.

When the sun would begin to sink behind the treetops, visitors would begin moving away. All would say how much they had enjoyed the day and move on.

Dad would move the chairs back inside. Tomorrow would be the beginning of a new week and next Sunday seemed a long way off!

Until next time!

Down South: An Afternoon For Redfish

By Tom Poland

Many years it's been since I fished, forty at least. The drought ended August 22. Out onto Port Royal I went with Beaufort fishing guide, Capt. Tuck Scott, and Tony Royal of Baystreet Outfitters. Out we went in Scott's Hells Bay Stealth, a shallow water skiff. We sought redfish, which go by various names ... spot tail, red drum, channel bass, and "red."

The weather cooperated and we had the Broad River portion of Port Royal to ourselves. Like a water bug, we skimmed the chop to shallow areas where spartina thrust green reeds up. Here and there you seed heads tossed in the wind. Spartina's detritus, you should know, forms the basis of the sea's food chain. It's no exaggeration to say we were in the sea's nursery.

A unique tide situation that occurs twice a month gave us ideal conditions for seeking redfish along the edges of Spartina. We sought and found them in shallow water. Redfish love fiddler crabs, and you can spot their tails in the air as they tip over and suck fiddler crabs from their hiding places.

Tony Royal worked a fly rod baited with crabs, a preferred redfish food. Watching a fly rod in action is a thing of beauty, and while I didn't fish myself, I photographed the outing for Shrimp Collards, & Grits Lifestyle Magazine, of which I'm editor. I fished with a Canon.

Capt. Tuck spotted reds from his tower and gave Tony directions ... "Cast at 11 o'clock. He's moving right to left. Try again at 9 o'clock." The directions worked and reds struck the tiny crabs with force. Tony worked them in slowly, steering them clear of Spartina best he could. Whatever we caught, we released.

The expedition brought back memories. I recalled fishing for bass in Granddaddy's farm ponds in Georgia. I thought of my grandmother teaching me to bait a hook, and I recalled watching dragonflies perch on my red-and-white cork, a sign of good luck. Bites are sure to come your way. When I was a boy, fishing was about all I wanted to do, but then life turned serious, work assumed center stage, and I left fishing in my wake. Until my Port Royal expedition.

It felt good to be out in all that sunshine and salt air. The adventure did me good. More than that, the outing reminded me of just how artificial man's world has become. Nothing's fake about nature. Live or die. It's as simple as that. As we fished, Tony, Capt. Tuck, and I discussed how juvenile redfish stay in the sound and estuaries until they mature. To venture into the big water too soon means being cut to pieces by porpoises, which herd them into shallows and feast on them. Then we saw a mink on a rack of detritus. Flashing white and bright in its dark chocolate mouth was a doomed blue crab, dinner. It was too far away for my lens but I got a shot nonetheless.

Port Royal deserves mention. North America's earliest explorers, Spaniards, came through here. The absence of freshwater rivers allows Spartina to flourish here, and Beaufort County possesses half of all of South Carolina's salt marshes. In the distance lay legendary Paris Island. Close by, Beaufort's Marine Corps Air Station is home to five Marine Corps F/A-18 squadrons. Toward sundown, a sole fighter jet flew over, of which the air base says, "The noise you hear is the sound of freedom." Outside of that jet, all we heard were the sounds of nature ... wind, shorebird cries, and the watery explosions of feeding redfish.

As the sun sank we headed back to the landing. We had released all fish but captured memories. It had been a good day and an especially good day to swap man's propped up house of cards for nature's brutal but beautiful world.

Coker College launches technology initiative

By Melissa Rollins
Editor
editor@newsandpress.net

After eighteen months of hard work and preparation, AccessCoker was launched at the start of the fall semester at Coker College. An initiative started to help level the playing field for students it also involved training faculty how to incorporate more technology in their classrooms.

Through AccessCoker, each incoming freshman to the Hartsville campus received an iPad and an Apple Pencil.

"Our mission was that AccessCoker would promote life-long learning, help personalize the college experience, create more connections between and among student, faculty and staff on and off campus, and we were going to increase our collaboration," said Dr. Susan Henderson, Provost and Dean of the Faculty. "We were going to better prepare our students for those 21st Century skills they need."

Henderson said that faculty and staff are constantly looking for ways to better prepare Coker's students for their careers after graduation.

"The academic year before last year, there was discussion among the cabinet related to student success, digital initiatives and thinking of ways to transform the teaching and learning experience," Henderson said. "At that point, members of the cabinet met with Apple folks at various locations. I was in the school of education at that point and our president asked me to go to Coopertino for the education deans' conference to get an idea of details. Then our president went to Maryville University who had had a very successful iPad launch. Last summer, the administrative cabinet decided that they definitely wanted to put this as a priority and work on it the last school year."

An eight-person committee was formed with representatives from across campus.

The Steering Committee was: (these were the titles at the time of the work):

- Dr. Susan Henderson, co-Chair (Dean of the Faculty)
- Dr. Cathleen Cuppett, co-Chair (Director, Center for Excellence in Teaching and Learning)
- Danielle Sewell - Director of Marketing and Communications

- Kyle Saverance - Chief Information Officer

- Dr. Casey Monette - Assistant Professor of Education

- Matthew Kron - Student

- Tyler "Gus" Mohlhenrich - Director of Athletics Media Relations

- Todd Rix - Director of the Library

- Brianna Douglas - Vice President of Student Success

"We met often to begin the process of figuring out how we would make this happen," Henderson said. "We were very fortunate that our administration supported us and allowed us to have the piece we were Apple supported us as well, brainstorming and coming to campus to help us plan the launch."

An Apple trainer visited Coker's campus seven different times for two-day training periods.

This technology launch parallels what is happening in the surrounding county, said Dr. Cathleen Cuppett, currently the Director of Digital Learning and Information Technology.

"If you look at our local community, in the Darlington County Schools they are one-to-one iPad and then in the high schools it's a MacBook," Cuppett said. "We have had discussions on campus about how we can best prepare our teacher candidates. They are going into classrooms where they are using this technology so I'm guessing that that also informed our decision about using Apple products."

Henderson pointed out that while they are using Apple products, the campus supports both operating systems.

"We named it AccessCoker because we wanted to create better access for students on and off campus," Henderson said. "I think it really came to life for me when I took this to a group of student-leaders, who would not be getting iPads this first year, and the very first comment was that this would help level the playing field. One person said that there were people in her class who only had a phone, some have the latest and greatest MacBook, others have an old phone with a cracked screen and they have to go find the computer lab. Eventually everyone will have the same device to work from wherever they would like to work."

Jarrett

"As we were eating, Robert was writing on a napkin sitting at the table," Jarrett said. "He said, 'This is a three-year deal for you. Are you good with this?' and handed me a napkin. There were a few numbers on it and I said that I was good with it. That was my contract. We shook hands but I didn't have an actual signed contract until the middle of 1996. We went to Daytona in our first race and won the Dayton 500 and I figured I was pretty secure at that point."

Where does S.C. Stand on School District Consolidation?

By South Carolina Policy Council

Each year, the state spends millions on duplicative administrative positions that could be used in the classroom. Instead of overhauling South Carolina's antiquated school district model, lawmakers have historically taken little action towards true reform.

One small step in the right direction was a proviso inserted this year's budget allowing the Superintendent of Education to consolidate administrative functions of school districts with less than 1,500 students. The superintendent has already begun this process by ordering a number of smaller rural districts to combine services. Estimated savings in one district alone will be about $600,000. However, this type of policy belongs in the law, not a budget proviso—as it will expire next year unless lawmakers decide to reauthorize it.

In contrast is last year's H.3023, which would have merely created a committee to "study the feasibility and cost effectiveness of consolidating the school districts within the individual counties of this State." The law did not pass, and even if it had, it would not have done anything to fix the school districts. Study committees can only recommend changes, not determine policy, and their typical impact is to simply give lawmakers time to delay progress on an issue without taking any real action. More importantly, the potential cost savings from district consolidation were conclusively shown by another study committee lawmakers created over a decade ago.

Among other things, this committee (created in 2005 by budget proviso) revealed no clear methodology or formula behind the state's numerous school districts. It also revealed a direct correlation between district sizes and spending, as larger districts tended to spend less money on district-level administrative costs, allowing for more in-classroom spending. The committee recommended that lawmakers find a way to consolidate school districts, stating that $21 million could be saved if state adopted a one district per county policy.

According to a study released last year by the State Department of Education (DOE), $35 million to $89 million could be saved by having school districts "modernize and/or collaborate" their services. Even the S.C. Supreme Court has proposed district consolidation as a potential solution to cut down spending.

School districts by the numbers:

- South Carolina has nearly double the number of school districts as it does counties (81 school districts, 46 counties)
- Most counties in the state only have one school district. However, 15 counties have multiple districts, including Spartanburg County which has seven in total.

- There are eight school districts in SC with less than 1,000 students. By comparison, most high schools in the state have more students than this.

- In 1950 there were 1,220 school districts, illustrating a historical trend towards district consolidation.

Obstacles to consolidation

With multiple parties in support of consolidation, and the numbers to back it up, why is the process moving so slowly?

One reason is that "district consolidation" and "school consolidation" are often incorrectly confused with each other. These are two entirely separate proposals. District consolidation would only merge district-level positions, such as superintendents and administrators, which oversee groups of schools. School consolidation is a far more drastic measure that would merge individual schools, inevitably forcing some schools to close.

Another oft-cited concern is that merging districts would result in job loss. This is likely true: combining school districts would result in the elimination of duplicative district-level positions—which is the entire point. Every dollar spent at the district level is a dollar that could be spent on teachers. Given that qualified teachers are in short supply, it is difficult to justify paying for administrative positions that a number of experts agree are unnecessary.

Legislation short of reform

Lawmakers during the 2017-18 legislative session had several chances to seriously address this issue, but the only measures to become law were H.4397, which consolidated Orangeburg County's three school districts into one, and the budget proviso allowing consolidation in the smallest districts, as well as districts in financial difficulty.

One proposed bill would have effectively expanded and codified that budget proviso—requiring that school districts have at least 2,500 students to receive state funding. Another bill would have mandated that each county be considered its own school district, also known as a "one county, one district" policy, a policy that 31 of 46 counties in the state already meet. Several other states in the Southeast also use this method, including Florida, North Carolina, and Georgia. Neither of these bills made it out of committee, however.

The legislature has the information and resources necessary to tackle this issue. South Carolina does not need another study committee in the place of essential reforms allowing for more classroom spending in the future.

Williams

and promoted various pieces of legislation related to health care and the expansion of Medicare / Medicaid benefits, providing care and services for veterans and their families, raising pay for public school teachers, modernizing the school bus fleet, and maximizing the per student dollar allowance provided by the state.

Though he is now a veteran of the SC General Assembly, Williams says he decided to run for the District 7 U.S. House of Representatives seat because he feels he can represent the interests of the entire district, which includes communities with wildly diverse revenue bases and priorities. Established in 2011 after the 2010 Census dictated apportionment of another House seat for South Carolina, District 7 includes all of Chesterfield, Dillon, Georgetown, Horry, Marlboro, and Marion Counties, as well as some parts of Florence County and Darlington County.

"Currently as the representative for District 62, I cover Darlington and Florence Counties. District 7 would add six more counties to my responsibilities, and I feel that all these counties need certain things to succeed. They all have different strengths and different things to work with, and I feel it's time we look at some of our rural communities and try to develop them with industry and education and health care," Williams says. "As far as some of our rural areas go, with jobs and with health care, we are not in the ball game. And I feel that Mr. Rice has not really supported health care for this region."

Williams says that if his campaign is successful, he plans to highlight the prevalence of chronic disease and work to improve care and treatment options. He also wants to see more energy focused on reviving manufacturing and agriculture in the large rural swaths of District 7, utilizing teamwork between the state's strong technical college programs and industrial prospects, and planning to capitalize on the future of multi-purpose crops such as hemp.

"The Grand Strand gets most of their revenue from tourism. The rest of the district doesn't have that, but it still has a lot to offer. If you're going to represent the people, you have to represent all of them, no matter their income, their race, their education, and I feel that we haven't had that sort of representation for this district," Williams says.

As Election Day approaches, Williams is spending time visiting constituents across the Pee Dee and along the coast, meeting voters and trying to get his message out. Meanwhile, he faces opposition for his District 62 seat from Republican challenger Billy Baldwin, former chairman of Darlington County Council and currently a member of the Darlington County School Board.

If Williams happens to win both his races, he must choose which office he will serve. If he chooses the higher office, he must resign his state house seat. A special election would then be scheduled, with the primary taking place on the eleventh Tuesday after the vacancy occurs, and the general election set for the twentieth Tuesday after the vacancy.

The general election will take place on Tuesday, November 6. For information on early voting, polling locations, or other voting related matters, contact Darlington County Elections and Registration at 843-398-4000.

One of the possibility facility changes discussed in the study should look familiar to board members, Newman said.

"They talked about Cain Elementary and its different buildings and renovating them potentially which would have cost, according to the study, around $11.2 million," Newman said. "Or, it says about building a new Cain and combining with Brunson-Dargan, that's in this study here, and it says that that cost figure would be $18.6 million.

That is where we are; that's pretty stunning. It is six-years-old."

Other items the board has discussed, like the early childhood program, are also covered in the study.

"We've talked about addressing our 4K and 5K students in the Hartsville-area, how that would look and what we would do if we were doing something differently," Newman said. "Well, they talk about different scenarios for that and how it would look based on either additions or a different facility. There are many things that we've talked about even in my short time here that they've covered in here. They don't say do this; they usually give three different options that could work for Darlington County School District."

Newman said that he would be interested in having the study updated and board members agreed that it would be worthwhile to know where the district stands now, compared to six years ago.

"There appears to be a good bit in here that I think is very relevant to the discussions that we've been having," Newman said.

Another subjects discussed during the work session was inter-district transfer students. Newman said that current district policy does not allow students living outside of Darlington County to attend any DCSD schools. The student population has been dropping over the last several years so board members might be interested in adjusting that policy, Newman said, as there seems to be interest by out of district students. Accepting these students would increase enrollment and would also increase money brought in by the district because out of district students would pay to attend DCSD schools. Several board members expressed interest in looking into the issue but also said that they had reservations about overcrowding of schools or other issues that could arise.

Governor's School for Science and Mathematics welcomes two Darlington County Students

Two students from Darlington County have accepted invitations to attend the South Carolina Governor's School for Science & Mathematics (GSSM) in Hartsville. They join 144 students from 90 high schools and 31 counties across South Carolina to form the Class of 2020. GSSM's student body of 286 juniors and seniors moved onto campus in mid-August and began classes on August 20. The beginning of the 2018-2019 school year kicks off a year-long celebration of GSSM's 30th anniversary of its founding. "We are honored to continue serving some of the best and brightest students in South Carolina," reflected Dr. Hector Flores, President of GSSM. Gabe Howle, child of Mr. and Mrs. Danny Howle, was accepted into GSSM from Darlington High School. Eric Niu, child of Mr. Xiaokai Niu and Mrs. Qun Wang, was accepted into GSSM from Hartsville High School. Acceptance into GSSM's rigorous residential program is through a selective process that identifies the state's most capable high school scholars. It reflects high academic and personal achievement and is a positive reflection on their school and community. For thirty years, GSSM has been one of the nation's top ranked residential high schools, serving the state's highest achieving juniors and seniors. It offers unique, college-level courses and a hands-on curriculum with a special focus on science, technology, engineering, math and research, along with concentrations in economics and entrepreneurship, as well as a full array of humanities courses. One of 12 specialized science and math programs in the country, the School has been nationally recognized for its overall excellence, strong mix of intellectual challenges and dedicated teachers, as well as its rigorous mentored scientific and economic research program. For more information on how to apply for GSSM's class of 2021, visit: <http://www.scgssm.org/admissions/residential-admissions>.

Living on Purpose

Nothing can keep us from God's love

By Dr. William Holland

Memories can be a wonderful place to visit when they are pleasant and filled with peace and joy. On the other hand, not all of our experiences have been good and can be more like a haunted house on a dark and stormy night. We all have our collections of thoughts and our own task of trying to figure out a way to deal with them. As most of us know, there are positive ways and negative ways to handle our past experiences. We can look around and see that many people are not doing such a good job when it comes to emotional management. The Lord wants us to give our problems to Him and allow Him to bring true healing as His way is always the best way.

Some will say, "you have not walked in my shoes" and this is very true. However, this does not mean the light of God's love cannot bring you comfort, forgiveness, and happiness. His promises are true and cannot fail which, to say the least, is a tremendous offer to consider. His love, mercy, and hope is available to anyone who has the faith to believe that He can transform our disappointments and stumbling blocks into victorious stepping-stones. In Psalm fifty-seven, we read where David is in great danger and is hiding in a cave to escape the wrath of Saul. However, even in this dark hour, we notice in verse one he is singing God's praises, "Have mercy on me, my God, have mercy on me, for in you I take refuge. I will take refuge in the shadow of your wings until this difficulty and burden has passed". There are many different types of trials and sorrows, but God's arms are always open to those who trust Him.

Maybe you were the one who was always picked last for games in gym class or in the neighborhood. Maybe someone spread a hurtful rumor about you that caused you much pain and distress. There are many individuals who for whatever reason have a non-existent relationship with parents or children, which is very painful. Some have been betrayed by a person they loved very dearly and are deeply wounded in the depths of their heart. Have you ever felt forgotten, rejected, alone, and unwanted? Sometimes discouragement punches you in the gut and then slowly dissipates and then there are times when the voices that tell you no one cares seem to hang over your head for weeks or months on end. Whatever the situation, even if you have made huge mistakes and hurt others, God wants you to know today that He cares about you more than you can imagine. Since you were in the womb, He has never taken His eyes off you. He knows every thought, seen every tear and wants a personal relationship with you more than anything.

I remember years ago watching a family member make fun of his nephew who was just a kid. At birthday parties, family dinners, cook-outs or whatever, the attacks were meant to be a joke for everyone's entertainment and laughter - everyone except that young boy. The boy grew up and now does not call or come around at all. I wonder why? I also heard a testimony one time from a young woman who shared about her painful childhood experiences with an uncle. He would always tease her for being so skinny and say derogatory comments about her body. Sadly, these rude and tawdry remarks are the only words she can ever remember him saying to her. I'm sure it never crossed his mind how this made a self-conscious adolescent girl feel. She went on to say this definitely had a negative impact on her self-esteem and later in life when he passed away she felt distant and numb as he seemed like a total stranger. Within our disappointments we can know that He will never hurt or abandon us and nothing can prevent His love from healing our mind and soul. "No, in ALL these things we are more than conquerors through him who loved us. For I am convinced that neither death nor life, neither angels nor demons, neither the present nor the future, nor any powers, neither height nor depth, nor anything else in all creation, will be able to separate us from the love of God that is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Romans 8:37-38.

Hurricane Irma Assistance Approaches $64 Million as South Carolina Continues to Recover

ATLANTA – One year after Hurricane Irma's winds swept the South Carolina coast, recovery and rebuilding efforts continue in communities across the Palmetto State. As of Aug. 1, 2018, almost $64 million in federal assistance has augmented South Carolina's recovery.

The Oct. 16, 2017, major disaster declaration made all 46 counties eligible to apply for reimbursement for actions the state took before the storm; repairing and replacing Irma-related damage to public infrastructure; and for FEMA's Hazard Mitigation Grant Program, which helps make communities across South Carolina more resilient.

Through the Public Assistance (PA) program, FEMA has obligated almost $16 million to cover at least 75 percent of eligible costs to repair, replace, or restore disaster-damaged facilities and critical infrastructure like roads, bridges, utilities, schools and hospitals.

The National Flood Insurance Program has paid more than $47.8 million to South Carolina policy holders for Irma related losses, and more than 90 percent of flood insurance claims were closed within five months.

The 2017 disaster season affected nearly 25 million in the United States. While recovery continues, FEMA and its interagency partners remain focused and dedicated to the continued resilience of affected communities.

As of July 25, 2018, FEMA and its federal partners had obligated $22.9 billion nationwide to support response and recovery from hurricanes Harvey, Irma,

Maria, and the California wildfires. FEMA and its federal partners have been making long term investments in affected communities and will continue to focus on the progress of recovery for years to come.

The devastating hurricanes and wildfires of 2017 serve as a wakeup call to the nation about the importance of preparing for disasters. Often, local citizens are the first in our communities to help after a disaster strikes and before first responders arrive. It is important to prepare in advance to help yourself and your community.

Warning signs of suicide

In June of 2018, the deaths by suicide of two high-profile celebrities garnered substantial attention. Within days of each other, fashion designer Kate Spade and television host and author Anthony Bourdain took their own lives.

The deaths of Spade and Bourdain prompted many to inquire about suicide, its causes and if there are any signs that might help them identify if a loved one is having suicidal thoughts. According to the American Foundation for Suicide Prevention, no single thing causes suicide. The AFSP notes that suicide is most often a byproduct of the convergence of stressors and health issues that, when coupled, create a sense of hopelessness and despair.

Depression and anxiety are two conditions most commonly associated with suicide. But the AFSP notes that most people who have been diagnosed with these conditions and actively manage them go on to engage in life. Undiagnosed depression and anxiety, as well as undiagnosed or unaddressed substance abuse, increase a person's risk for suicide. That's why it's so important for men, women and young people to learn to recognize warning signs for suicide and put themselves in position to promptly address their own issues or those of a loved one.

Speech
The AFSP notes that people who take their own lives may speak about doing so prior to committing suicide. People should seek help if they or a loved one talks about feeling hopeless, having no reason to live or being a burden to others. People who speak of feeling trapped or feeling unbearable pain also may be exhibiting warning signs of suicide.

Behavior
Behavior, especially behavior that can be linked to a painful event, loss or change, is another potential indicator that a person is having suicidal thoughts. Such behaviors include:

- Increased use of alcohol or drugs
- Looking for a way to end their lives, such as searching online for methods
- Withdrawing from activities
- Isolating from family and friends
- Sleeping too much or too little

• Visiting or calling people to say goodbye

• Giving away prized possessions

• Aggression

• Fatigue

Mood

Mood also is a potential indicator that a person might be having suicidal thoughts. In addition to depression and anxiety, people who are considering taking their own lives may exhibit a loss of interest in things they once enjoyed. Irritability, humiliation, agitation/anger, and relief/sudden improvement are other moods the AFSP notes may be warning signs for suicide.

The deaths of two highly regarded celebrities brought suicide to the forefront in 2018. Taking the time to understand suicide and its warning signs can help people prevent tragedies. More information is available at www.afsp.org. People who are in crisis or suspect a loved one may be in crisis are urged to call the National Suicide Prevention Lifeline at 1-800-273-TALK (8255) or contact the Crisis Text Line by texting TALK to 741741.

Storm water project to cause temporary road closures

DARLINGTON - Several temporary road closures will come to the West side of Darlington as the West Darlington Storm Water Project continues to move forward.

Landsdown Earth and Pipe will add a second crew this week to begin work at the intersection of Anhow and Coker Streets and working out from there and along Chalmers Street. These roads may be temporarily closed during the day but not overnight for approximately two to four weeks.

The contractor also plans to put a temporary patch on the section of Pearl Street that was removed to install storm water pipes and catch basins last week before race activities Labor Day weekend. The final asphalt will be completed in the later stages of the project.

Additionally, as crews follow the storm drain path, crews will have to close West Broad Street between Milling and Washington Streets. Expect delays and detours in that area for about four weeks once work commences.

The $2.75 million project combines a South Carolina Rural Infrastructure Authority (RIA) Grant $445,000 and funds from a storm water bond to renovate parts of the city's storm water drainage system. The project area affects the West side of town stretching from Swift Creek and Fleming Street to West Broad and Chalmers Street. It includes the removal of 2,452 linear feet of existing pipe, removal and replacement of 609 linear feet of roadway and one bridge, the clearing 2.52 acres, the installation of 21 catch basins, the replacement of one fire hydrant, the replacement of 300 linear feet of gravity sewer, and the installation of 5,738 linear feet of pipe ranging in width from 15 inches to 60 inches.

The passing of trailblazer Sarah Leverette

COLUMBIA – The Smith/Norrell campaign issued the following statement about the passing of Sarah Leverette, who died last week at the age of 98:

Sarah Leverette was a pioneer who never made a big deal about it. Graduating from USC law school in 1943, she not only found a lot of doors were closed to her, they were "locked." She didn't let that stop her.

She went on to become law librarian at USC Law School, where she taught legal research and writing to generations of South Carolina lawyers. She influenced a wide assortment of future leaders of our state, including former Gov. Dick Riley, former SC Supreme Court Chief Justice Jean Toal, and I.S. Leevy Johnson, who would become the first African-American to serve as president of the S.C. Bar.

As a force in the League of Women Voters for 60 years, she was a leading advocate for informed democracy, fair government and women's rights.

"We have lost a tremendous force for good in our state," said James Smith. "Sarah seemed invincible. She was a passionate advocate, a trailblazer and an example for men and women on what it means to serve. I will miss her deeply, as will everyone who knows the roles she has played in making South Carolina a better place."

"As a woman and a lawyer, I owe a tremendous debt of gratitude to her, as do so many others," said Mandy Powers Norrell. "We stand on her shoulders. She made it easier for the rest of us."

McLeod Home Health recognized for Patient Satisfaction

McLeod Home Health recently received Strategic Healthcare Programs' (SHP) Best Superior Performer award for achieving an overall patient satisfaction score that ranked in the top 20 percent of all clients in 2017.

The annual SHP Best performer was developed to recognize home health agencies across the country that consistently provide high-quality service to their patients. SHP Best award recipients are determined by ranking the overall score for all SHP Home Health Care Consumer Assessment of Health Care Survey (HHC-AHPS) clients, which includes more than 4,500 home health agencies.

"It is an honor and privilege to accept this award on behalf of McLeod Home Health," said Denise Melton, Administrator of McLeod Home Health. "We have a wonderful staff that work hard and are caring and kind. This award is a reflection of the staff. Kind words can be short and easy to speak, but their echoes are truly endless."

FDTC awarded a five-year federal grant

The U.S. Department of Education has awarded Florence-Darlington Technical College (FDTC) funding to continue its Upward Bound Program for five years. The first year will be funded at $385,586.

FDTC's Upward Bound Program is based on the main campus in Florence. It offers a broad array of services to help high school students complete their high school diplomas and successfully transition and complete postsecondary credentials. Career assessment, financial aid assistance, cultural enrichment activities, workshops, and college tours are examples of the activities to which Upward Bound students have access.

"The Upward Bound Program is very important in helping high school students reach their goals. Each student receives a coach who is their advocate and will help them recognize and overcome challenges that may arise," said Jennifer Mabry, FDTC's Director of Institutional Grants.

FDTC's Upward Bound staff will be working with area high schools to identify and enroll eligible students in the program. The eight eligible high schools are in FDTC's three county service area. The high schools are Creek Bridge, Darlington, Hannah-Pamplico, Lake City, Lamar, Marion, Timmonsville and Wilson.

Creative ways to recycle leaves

Leaves cascading down from trees indicate the arrival of autumn. However, colorful and awe-inspiring autumn leaves can be a hazard if left to lie on the ground too long.

Fallen leaves form a dense insulator to protect trees' roots and prevent competing plants from growing. Decomposing leaves also provide nutrients for the tree. But wet leaves can be a safety hazard and leaves left on the lawn through the winter can pose a threat to the grass. These are just a couple of reasons why so much effort is placed on leaf clean-up in the fall. The following are some creative ways to recycle leaves that fall from your trees in the weeks to come.

- Mulch: Shredded leaves can make for a great amendment to fertilizer for garden beds and even the lawn. Leaves lying on the grass can be mulched into small pieces with a mulching mower so they don't choke the blades of grass. Leaves also can be broken down with a string trimmer, a leaf blower that has a vacuum function or a commercial shredder/chipper. Add the shredded leaves to a compost pile or use them to fill container plants before adding regular potting soil.

- Insulation: Collect leaves to mound over delicate perennial plants and shrubs. The leaves will add more warmth to the soil and may help plants make it through harsh winters. Just remove the leaves slowly when spring arrives so that the soil underneath can get the sunlight and water it needs to thrive. Leave some leaves in the yard so that animals can use them as nesting material and line their dens for the winter.

- Stuffing: Create whimsical scarecrows as part of your autumn decoration scheme. Gather older clothes that you no longer use and stuff the sleeves of shirts and the legs of pants with leaves, which are less expensive and easier to come by than straw. Use a few pieces of straw around the neck and hand areas of the scarecrow for visual effect. Tie off with twine and display your scarecrow.

- Bedding: Chicken owners can use fallen leaves as bedding in their chicken coops. Dry leaves also may create more comfortable and drier conditions for goats and other livestock. Goats may look to recently fallen leaves as a nutritious food source. Gather the leaves and let the goats munch before you further rake and compost the leaves.

- Decorations: Natural leaves can be used as decorations both inside and outside a home. String freshly fallen leaves together and wrap them around a grapevine wreath for a rustic door decoration. Leaves can be placed in clear vases and put on display for a cheap way to showcase some autumn color. Preserve favorite leaves with a lamination machine or by sealing them between heated sheets of waxed paper. Cut out the leaf shapes and use for hanging window decorations.

- Recreation: Leaves have long been favorite toys for children, who eagerly await jumping into large piles of fallen leaves. Fill paper bags with leaves and draw a target on the front. Let kids test their skill aiming for the targets. Children can camouflage their clothing with leaves and masking tape and have a more intense session of "hide and seek."

Natural ways to fight fall allergies

As the days become shorter and the weather cools down, a new crop of allergy symptoms can arise, turning the autumn season into one marked by sneezing, scratchy throats and itchy eyes. Medications can alleviate such symptoms, but allergy sufferers may want to investigate some natural ways to beat allergies.

According to the American College of Allergy, Asthma & Immunology, ragweed is one of the more common triggers of autumn allergies. Ragweed contributes to "hay fever," which is a term to describe allergic rhinitis that occurs as a symptom of ragweed pollen in the air. Ragweed releases pollen in mid-August, and it can continue to be problematic until a deep freeze arrives.

Other sources of fall allergies include leaf mold and pollen that is present on fallen leaves. This gets circulated when people begin to rake or blow fallen leaves. Classroom pets and chalk dust in schools (although chalkboards are largely a thing of the past) are other autumn allergens.

The good news is that many natural remedies work just as effectively as over-the-counter medications in regard to combatting ragweed and pollen problems. Here's how to beat the fall allergy blues.

- Stay away from pollen. Stay away from pollen and prevent it from being tracked indoors. Remove shoes when walking through the door. Take off clothes worn outside and launder them promptly, showering to wash pollen off of the body. Use an air conditioner or keep windows closed when the pollen count is high.

- Increase omega-3 fatty acids. It is well documented that fatty acids are good for brain health and cardiovascular well-being. But these acids also may help with allergies. A German study linked foods high in omega-3 fatty acids with the ability to fight inflammation, which is a hallmark of allergy suffering. Foods that are high in fatty acids include walnuts, flax, eggs, and cold-water fatty fish.

- Rinse off pollen. Use a mild cleanser to rinse the eyelids and eyelashes of pollen, as this is where it tends to congregate after being outdoors. Use saline spray to clear nasal passages of excess pollen as well.

- Take natural supplements. A study published in the journal Clinical and Experimental Allergy found participants who used tablets of the herb butterbur showed significant allergy relief after only one week. Select herbs from reputable manufacturers who certify them.

- Use eucalyptus oil. This oil is great to have in the house to help clear up sinuses and provide nasal congestion relief. Mix a small amount with coconut oil and rub onto the chest. There also is some evidence that adding a few drops of eucalyptus oil to cleansing products can help kill dust mites around the house.

- Wear a mask. When doing housework or yard work, wear a mask to reduce the inhalation of specific allergens.

Avoid seasonal allergies by exploring natural ways to find prevention or relief of symptoms.

Local mother donates over 100 ounces of life-saving breast milk to milk bank

August is National Breastfeeding Month and one young mother in the Pee Dee has been helping premature infants that need the highly nutritious breast milk through a generous donation to the Mother's Milk Bank.

Traci Skaris of Hartsville is currently breastfeeding her second child, daughter Reagan, and has been donating extra breast milk to the Mother's Milk Bank of SC in Charleston via the satellite depot at Carolina Pines Regional Medical Center.

Skaris delivered both of her children at Carolina Pines. Son Aiden was born in 2014 and Reagan was born in March of 2018.

"After a month, I started pumping to store up for work," said Skaris, a teacher at Hartsville High School. "Because I make a good amount of milk, our freezer got kind of full. I told my husband that maybe I should help donate to the Milk Bank. You don't want that liquid gold to go to waste. I hated throwing it out with my first baby."

"Having been a NICU nurse in the early part of my nursing career I am very grateful to, and in awe of, moms like Traci who are willing and able to donate their excess breast milk to improve the outcomes of fragile very premature infants," said Holly Prescott RN BSN, the International Board Certified Lactation Consultant (IBCLC) for Carolina Pines Regional Medical Center.

The Milk Bank depository was opened at Carolina Pines two years ago and it was through that initial story that Skaris heard about the program. Her donation on August 17th was her largest donation of 111 ounces. The Mother's Milk Bank of SC sends all the supplies needed to her home. She then brings the frozen milk to the hospital labeled with an assigned ID to be stored in the depot freezer. Once the Milk Bank is notified of the donation, they send a cooler to the hospital that is sent back to Charleston. "They make it very easy," Skaris said.

Benefits of Breast Milk to Premature and Full-Term Infants

Holly Prescott RN BSN serves as International Board Certified Lactation Consultant for Carolina Pines Regional Medical Center. An IBCLC is a healthcare professional that specializes in the clinical management of breastfeeding. This includes teaching families about the benefits of breastfeeding, how to get the best start, supporting a family's feeding goals in the hospital and after discharge, working through breastfeeding challenges, teaching staff how to support breastfeeding mothers, staying up to date on evidence-based practices through continuing education and being a lactation resource for local healthcare providers.

Each year, 800 very low birth-weight babies (infants born weighing less than 3.3 pounds) are born in South Carolina. When babies are born prematurely, many of their organs are not fully developed. This puts them at risk for a number of diseases within the first weeks of life. Many of these diseases can be prevented by making sure these babies receive the antibodies and nutrients found in human breast milk. Often, the stress of having a sick newborn can make producing breast milk difficult for many of these new moms. Unfortunately, donated human milk is in short supply. That's where moms who produce excess milk can help. Donations are accepted at satellite depot sites throughout the state, such as the one at Carolina Pines, frozen and then shipped to the Mother's Milk Bank of SC in Charleston. Donation starts with a 15-minute phone screen directly with the Milk Bank. The screening is very similar to blood donation screening.

What is it in human milk that keeps babies healthier than artificial milk?

- Research in the field of human milk has exploded! There are amazing long-term health benefits for sick infants and, of course, for healthy babies and their mothers. Research has found that 820,000 children's lives and billions of healthcare dollars could be saved globally if human babies were all fed human milk! Yet, only 40 percent of newborns are breast-fed.

- Babies who receive human milk have fewer infections, especially gastrointestinal and respiratory, and lower rates of obesity, Type II diabetes and allergies.

- Premature infants receiving mother's milk have a much lower incidence of a life threatening intestinal illness, called NEC, gain weight faster and spend less time in the hospital.

- Mothers who choose to breastfeed have lower rates of postpartum hemorrhage, obesity, and breast and ovarian cancers.

- Colostrum is the small volume but high-quality milk a baby gets in the first couple of days of life before a mother's higher volume "mature milk" comes in between day 3 and 5. It is made specifically for a newborn's tiny tummy at birth. Colostrum is full of antibodies that prime a baby's gut and help fight off infections until their own immune system kicks in.

- Human milk is often called White Blood. You may have heard the term "human microbiome" in the news recently. Researchers are finding that too few good bacteria and far too many bad bacteria in the gut leads to many diseases of children and adults. Newborns get their good bacteria naturally from the birth canal, lying on their mother's skin soon after birth (called "skin to skin" time) and breast milk. This helps stimulate the immune system to grow. Overuse of antibiotics, caesarian sections and the low rate of breastfeeding affect this delicate balance.

FMU Observatory dedicates new telescope

On September 7th, from 7 - 10 p.m., a public viewing session will be held at the Francis Marion University Observatory to dedicate their new 14-inch Meade telescope.

Some of the objects visitors will see are beautiful star clusters such as M11 and M13, the planetary nebula M57, double stars, the planets Jupiter, Saturn, and Mars, and the Andromeda Galaxy.

Parking is in Lot D with a short walk to the observatory. Bring a flashlight as it will be dark.

Celebrating Hispanic heritage

Each year between September 15 to October 15 people observe and celebrate the unique histories, contributions and cultural influences of Hispanics.

Hispanic people are those who hail or whose ancestors hail from South America, Central America, Mexico, Spain, and areas of the Caribbean. Throughout early autumn, Hispanic culture and history is celebrated. The dates of Hispanic Heritage Month is significant because it includes the anniversaries of independence for various Latin American countries. September 15 marks when Costa Rica, El Salvador, Guatemala, Honduras, and Nicaragua achieved independence.

The first official Hispanic heritage commemoration was observed in 1968 as Hispanic Heritage Week. It was expanded in 1988 under then-president Ronald Regan to encompass a full month. Enacted into law on August 17, 1988, National Hispanic Heritage Month has been celebrated ever since.

The term "Hispanic" refers to people who can trace their lineage to Spanish-speaking nations. Hispanic also includes Latinos, who originate from Latin American countries. Nearly all Latinos also can be classified as Hispanic, with the exception of Brazilians because they speak Portuguese. People from Spain would be considered Hispanic, but not Latino. Other Latin American countries that are French-speaking, like Haiti, also cannot be classified as Hispanic.

According to Hispanic Research Inc., the Hispanic demographic in the United States includes people from more than 20 countries. For marketing and research purposes, as well as classification, these nations and territories are primarily listed as Hispanic.

- Argentina
- Bolivia
- Chile
- Colombia
- Costa Rica
- Cuba
- Dominican Republic
- Ecuador
- El Salvador
- Guatemala
- Honduras
- Mexico
- Nicaragua
- Panama
- Paraguay
- Peru
- Puerto Rico
- Spain
- Uruguay
- Venezuela

When mid-September arrives, the Americas and their Latin American neighbors pay homage to the very influential and ever-growing Hispanic population. It is a time of food, festivals and fanfare.

Hispanic scientists throughout history

As the second-largest ethnic group across much of North America, Hispanics have made significant inroads across many different fields and occupations.

Over time, many Hispanics have been influential in the fields of engineering, space exploration, chemistry, and much more. The accomplishments of Hispanic scientists have helped shape the world.

- Alfonso Caso y Andrade: Caso didn't begin as a scientist but as a philosopher. In 1925, the Mexico City native began taking classes in anthropology. He would go on to make incredible discoveries at the excavation of Tomb Seven at Monte Albán, proving the Mixtec people succeeded the Zapotec as masters of the city.

- France A. Córdova: Astrophysicist Cordova is the director of the National Science Foundation, an agency that develops programs to advance all fields of scientific discovery. During her career, Córdova conducted important research on X-ray and gamma ray sources, black holes and accretion discs.

- Carlos Juan Finlay: Born in Cuba, Finlay was a pioneer in the study of yellow fever. When he first presented his research that mosquitoes transmit the disease in 1881, Finlay became a joke at Havana's Academy of Sciences. Finlay spent the next 20 years refining his theories until his hypothesis became widely accepted.

- Bernardo Alberto Houssay: Houssay studied the pituitary gland from a very young age, focusing on its relationship with sugar metabolism. His work helped earn him a Nobel Prize in 1947. Even more importantly, Houssay's research proved a turning point in diabetes management.

- Ellen Ochoa: Born in Los Angeles, Ochoa became the world's first Hispanic female astronaut in 1991. Ochoa logged more than 900 hours in space during her career. She first served on a nine-day mission aboard the space shuttle Discovery, where she studied the Earth's ozone layer.

- Eloy Rodriguez: Rodriguez is a Mexican American born in Edinburg, TX. As a biochemist, he collaborated with primatologist Richard Wrangham to introduce the concept of zoopharmacognosy, a behavior in which non-human animals self-medicate by selecting and ingesting or topically applying plants, soils, insects, and psychoactive drugs to prevent or reduce the harmful effects of pathogens and toxins.

Many of the greatest scientists are of Hispanic descent. Their work has been groundbreaking and of great importance.

Francis Marion's Industrial Engineering program receives its accreditation from ABET

Francis Marion University's Industrial Engineering program has been accredited by the Engineering Accreditation Commission of ABET, the highly respected worldwide leader in the accreditation of engineering and technology programs.

FMU has moved through the accreditation process while enrolling and graduating its first classes of engineers.

The Industrial Engineering program is part of FMU's Department of Physics and Engineering. Dr. Derek Jokisch, chair of the department, calls the ABET accreditation a significant achievement.

"A lot of people, particularly our fantastic engineering faculty, have worked a long time to reach this milestone," says Jokisch. "Our students and graduates are quickly achieving great things which continue to be recognized and supported by industry partners."

Dr. Fred Carter, president of Francis Marion University, says the accreditation is a big step on the way to more substantial accomplishments in the years ahead.

"I applaud Derek and the faculty in the Department of Physics and Engineering for the time and effort spent achieving this milestone," Carter said. "In the past four years, they have built a superb program for the state and region. Now, we need to add a Mechanical Engineering degree to the curriculum too."

FMU is in the midst of planning a new complementary program in Mechanical Engineering. That program is expected to start within the next couple of years.

The Industrial Engineering program is FMU's first engineering program with a baccalaureate degree. It began in 2014, after extensive consultation with state and local business leaders, and saw its first graduates complete the program in 2017. A second class graduated last spring. To date, all graduates of the program are employed in their field, many in the Pee Dee Region.

College and high school students and DUI

Impaired driving is a serious problem for college and high school students. US statistics show in a recent study that 3.4 million students between the ages of 18 and 24 drove while under the influence of alcohol. The Hartsville Police Department is asking that you make the right choices as you begin this new school year.

If you are of age, please make sure you have a designated driver. Studies show that 12 percent of college students surveyed admitted to having five or more beers after they had agreed to be the designated driver. Of the group surveyed, 23 percent admitted they had at least one beer. If you are under twenty-one years old, please remember that underage consumption and possession of alcohol is illegal in South Carolina.

Driving Under the Influence has many consequences. The greatest consequence is the loss of life. No family should ever have to suffer losing someone over this terrible crime. There are also numerous consequences you could face if you were to survive a DUI related crash or if you are convicted of DUI. If you are attending College or are enrolled in programs that are grant or scholarship funded, you could lose that financial support based on off-campus conduct. These sources of funding are vitally important and one conviction could ruin it all for you. You are working hard on establishing a foundation for your future success in life. Please do not do anything to jeopardize your future, your life or someone else's life based on your decision to drive impaired.

The Hartsville Police Department will continue aggressive enforcement of DUI offenders. So far this year, HPD has taken over 70 impaired drivers off of the streets of Hartsville. As a part of our efforts to reduce impaired driving, we will continue to use public safety checkpoints and aggressive impaired driving situations. We want everyone to be safe on our roadways, and we want to wish all students a happy and successful school year.

The many health benefits of honey

Honey is nature's sweet nectar. While honey certainly can add flavor to various recipes or be enjoyed straight out of the jar, it has many other surprising benefits as well. Used since ancient times as both a food and for medicinal purposes, honey can make for a versatile addition to anyone's diet.

- Substitute for refined sugar: Refined sugar offers little to no nutritional value and is full of empty calories. Heathline says that honey has bioactive plant compounds and antioxidants as well as trace amounts of vitamins and minerals. The antioxidants in honey, which include phenols and flavonoids, may help prevent cardiovascular disease, stroke and some types of cancer.

- Has antibacterial and antifungal properties: According to the Honey Research Unit at the University of Waikato in New Zealand, honey is antibacterial. Honey will not foster growth of these microorganisms because it contains small amounts of hydrogen peroxide. Because of these properties, some people say that honey can help disorders such as ulcers and bacterial gastroenteritis, or other conditions where fungi and bacteria grow unchecked.

- Soothes sore throat: Taking a tablespoon of honey to relieve itchy, dry throats and coughs can be effective. In a study published in the Archives of Pediatrics and Adolescent Medicine, it was determined that honey could be just as effective at stemming cough as the popular medicine dextromethorphan.

- Helps reduce inflammation: Honey is well known for its anti-inflammatory properties. As a result, honey can help treat diabetes, cardiovascular disease, atherosclerosis, and other diseases traced back to widespread inflammation, according to Greek researcher Natalia Vallianou of the Evangelismos Hospital in Athens.

- Regulates blood sugar: The combination of fructose and glucose in honey may help the body regulate its blood sugar levels, which could be beneficial to those with diabetes. Certain types of honey also may have a lower hypoglycemic index, which means they don't cause a dramatic shift in blood sugar, according to the food and health resource Real Food for Life.

- Has probiotic properties: Some varieties of honey contain large amounts of the friendly bacteria that the body needs to maintain a healthy gut microbiome.

- Promotes healing: There is evidence that clinical use of honey on burns and wounds can be beneficial. Data published in the Scientific World Journal said that honey can be used to dress wounds and that it produces similar results to other topical treatments in promoting healing.

Honey is a natural wonder that can be equally useful in the kitchen and in the medicine cabinet.

- S.C. Voter Registration Card with Photo
- Federal Military ID
- U.S. Passport

If you have one of these IDs, you are ready to vote. Voters should remember to bring one of these IDs with them to the polling place. Voters without Photo ID can get one free of charge from the Department of Motor Vehicles or their county voter registration office. Voters who encounter an obstacle to getting a Photo ID should bring their paper voter registration card without a photo with them to their polling place. These voters can then sign an affidavit swearing to their identity and to their obstacle to obtaining a Photo ID and vote a provisional ballot. This ballot will count unless the county board of voter registration and elections has grounds to believe the affidavit is false. For more information on Photo ID, visit scVOTES.org or contact your county board of voter registration and elections.

At 9:00 a.m. on November 6, the County Board of Voter Registration and Elections will begin its examination of the absentee ballot return envelopes at Darlington County Board Elections and Registration Annex Building 135 Cashua Street, Darlington SC 29532 (843)398-4900.

At 10:00 a.m. on November 9, the County Board of Canvassers will hold a hearing to determine the validity of all provisional ballots cast in this election. This hearing will be held at the Darlington County Board Elections and Registration Annex Building 135 Cashua Street, Darlington SC 29532

The following Constitutional Amendment Question will appear on ballots in the November 6, 2018 General Election:

Amendment 1
Must Section 7, Article VI of the Constitution of this State, relating to state constitutional officers, be amended so as to provide that beginning in January 2023, or upon a vacancy in the office of Superintendent of Education after the date of the ratification of the provisions of this paragraph, whichever occurs first, the Superintendent of Education must be appointed by the Governor, with the advice and consent of the Senate; to provide that the appointed Superintendent of Education shall serve at the pleasure of the Governor; and to require the General Assembly to provide by law for the duties, compensation, and qualifications for the office?

Explanation
A 'Yes' vote will require the Superintendent of Education be appointed by the Governor with the consent of the Senate.
A 'No' vote maintains the current method of electing a Superintendent of Education

NOTICE is further given that the successful bidder, other than Plaintiff, at said sale will be required to deposit immediately with the Special Referee an amount equal to five (5%) percent of his bid in cash, and if such deposit is not made, the Special Referee will resell said property on the sales day or some subsequent sales day as may appear advantageous. In case the successful bidder should fail to comply with his bid by payment of the balance of the purchase price within thirty (30) days after acceptance of his bid, his deposit shall be forfeited and the property resold on some subsequent sales day without further Order of the Court, at the risk of the purchaser. The purchaser will be required to pay for the deed, documentary stamps on the deed, recording of the deed, and interest on the amount of the bid from date of sale through date of compliance with the bid at the rate of six (6%) percent per annum. Since a deficiency judgment is waived, the bidding shall be closed upon the date of sale.

This property is sold subject to taxes and assessments, existing easements and restrictions of record. If Plaintiff or Plaintiff's representative does not appear at the above-described sale, then the sale of the property will be null, void, and of no force and effect. In such event, the sale will be rescheduled for the next available sales day.
